Chiang Maps Protracted Guerrilla War On Japanese

Needs Only Two Months to Reorganize, Says Generalissimo.

Sees 50 Divisions In Field by Spring

Occupation of Country Will Prove Costly to Foe, He Promises.

The Japanese northern army, advancing on the important rail junction of Suchow, seized the Tomb of Confucius, Chinese sage, but promised to guard it from desecration.—Page 3.

Long War Envisioned.

By James A. Mills.

With the Chinese National Army—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, in an interview at his field headquarters near Wuchang, December 22, said the Chinese had drawn up a new plan of operations which, they believed, would enable them to hold the Japanese at bay for some time.

"We need only two months in which to reorganize and strengthen our armies, which naturally, owing to Japan's superior mechanical equipment, suffered considerable losses in Shanghai and Nanking," the general said.

"By spring we shall have 50 or more full divisions in the field. If Japan thinks China is finished militarily, she is the most self-deluded nation in the world. Our three months' resistance at Shanghai against overwhelming odds has proved that our soldiers can and will fight. The end of the war is still far off."

He Radiates Optimism.

(Only a few days ago Chiang gave up his civil administrative duties to devote his entire efforts to the military command. He also took direct charge of the navy, and divided China into seven military zones to co-ordinate the fight against Japan.)

Chiang seemed to radiate buoyancy, good cheer and optimism. If he felt any misgivings over China's tremendous casualties thus far, which conservative estimates place at nearly half a million men, he betrayed not the faintest sign.

When asked what he would do when Japan landed troops in South China and cut off China's main source of war supplies over the Canton-Hankow Railroad, he said confidently:

"We will find other routes. In its thousands of years of history China has learned to be resourceful. There is nothing to prevent us resorting to the ancient but primitive way of getting supplies over obscure camel routs and over inaccessible frontiers. Japan cannot suffocate us merely by blocking our coastline."

Plans Guerrilla Warfare.

Chiang, one of China's greatest strategists, believed Japan would require from 25 to 30 divisions to retain, pacify and administer the territory she now holds in China.

"It is comparatively easy for an army to occupy territory, but it is much more difficult for any army to keep that territory," the generalissimo said.

"You may be sure the Japanese forces in China, which are becoming more and more dispersed and farther away from their bases, will be continually harassed and threatened by our forces which will attack the Japanese troops in the rear and on the flanks. Their occupation of China will be a costly one."

Chiang was dressed in a plain khaki suit, with close-fitting military collar, without epaulets, decorations, insignia of rank or gold braid.

Probation Officer Recalls Robbery Threat of One of Suspects; Other Is the Daughter of Policeman Assigned to the Mystery.

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., Jan. 4.—A woman's "hunch" clipped the crime careers of two thrill-seeking young women who confessed today, police said, to the $2.10 holdup slaying of a bus-driving father of two children.

Mrs. Ethel Strouse Sohl, 20, daughter of a Newark radio patrol officer who with fellow officers sought to solve the crime, and Genevieve Owens, 17, were held without bail when arraigned before Recorder Everett B. Smith in suburban Belleville on charges of murder.

Their arrest followed quickly an investigation launched by Newark probation officials, after one of them, Mrs. Helen Durning, said Miss Owens commented yesterday, "If things don't improve I might go out and try a holdup." Miss Owens was on probation.

Joseph Cocozza, acting captain of prosecutor's detectives, said Mrs. Sohl confessed she held up William Barhorst, 34, with a sawed-off rifle December 21 at the end of his run, and pulled the trigger when he attempted to seize the weapon.

She seized the change clip, Cocozza said, ran back to the auto where Miss Owens waited and said: "I had a tussle and I think I shot a man."

The two women, who met in the House of Detention in July, told police, Cocozza said, they engaged in a career of crime "for the fun of it."

Fugitive, Held as Vagrant, Identified Through Fingerprints.

"Marble-eyed" Wendell Forrest Bowers last night made a "full and detailed confession," the Federal Bureau of Investigation announced, to the murder of Mrs. Wilma V. Carpenter at her fashionable home in Norristown, a suburb of Philadelphia, and to the beating of Miss Mary Griffin, 22-year-old beauty shop operator, who was her guest.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the F. B. I., said the confession was obtained a few hours after the announcement of Bowers' capture December 20, a week after the crime, in Louisville, Ky., on a vagrancy charge.

Mrs. Carpenter was shot—once in the back and again in the head—with her own pistol when she struggled with her murderer after he ordered her to tie up her pretty companion, the F. B. I. said the confession revealed.

Bowers said he broke into the home at night while Mrs. Carpenter and Miss Griffin were away. Ten days before he had been discharged from the Pennsylvania Industrial School at Huntington.

Bowers, according to the confession, first vainly searched the house for money. He remained for two hours and then, as he heard a car drive up in front, hid behind a Joint Committee Sessions to Study Prettyman Report Envisioned.

Joint meeting of the Senate and House District Committees may be held on District government reorganization soon, Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, revealed yesterday on his return from Puerto Rico. He said he had discussed the joint meetings with Representative Vincent L. Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, chairman of the House District Committee.

Senator King said he was ready to call a meeting of the Senate committee as soon as the District Commissioners submitted legislative proposals. Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, chairman of the sub-committee which will handle the Prettyman report, said he would co-operate in the move for a joint investigation.

Former Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman headed a committee of 21 "representative" citizens who, at the request of the District Commissioners, studied means of reorganizing the municipal government for greater efficiency. It was the first committee of residents ever appointed for such a study.

Rep. Hill Leading Heflin, 2 to 1, In Alabama's Race for Senate

New Deal Backer Ahead in Unofficial Count From Half of State.

By the United Press

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 4.—Representative Lister Hill (Democrat), Alabama, staunch New Deal supporter, tonight held a more than two-to-one lead over his nearest opponent, former Senator Thomas J. Heflin, critic of Rooseveltian policies in the Alabama Senatorial primary.

Heflin, recovering from lobar pneumonia in a Lafayette, Ala., hospital, issued a statement conceding the nomination.

On the basis of unofficial returns from 1,453 of the State's 2,200 ballot boxes, Hill held a margin of more than 34,000 votes over Heflin in the primary to fill the unexpired Senate term of Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black. Charles Williams, Shelby County farmer and dark horse of the race, trailed.

An unofficial tabulation showed: Hill, 61,200; Heflin, 29,928; Williams, 3,483.

REP. LISTER HILL.

Hill, running on a "strictly 100 per cent New Deal" platform, which included support of the controversial wage-hour and court reform measures, was one of the few Southern Congressmen to vote for the pay-hour bill in the House.

New Road Bill Ignores Plea For Economy

Cartwright to Introduce Plan to 'Carry On' Present Funds.

Doesn't 'Want' Fight But Scheme Is His 'Baby,' Oklahoman Says.

By Robert C. Albright.

Despite White House appeals for cuts in highway appropriations, a bill will be introduced in the House by roads bloc leaders to "carry on" Federal road authorizations at $238,000,000 a year through 1940 and 1941.

Chairman Wilburn Cartwright, of the House Roads Committee, said a new bill only slightly varying from the 1938 and 1939 authorizations will be introduced in "tentative" form today or tomorrow.

Cartwright's failure to call a special session meeting of his committee on President Roosevelt's recommendation for cancellation of 1939 roads authorizations recently brought a letter of explanation from the Oklahoman. The President responded with a sharp admonition that Congress "must accept full responsibility" if it spends beyond budget limits.

Doesn't 'Want' Fight.

Cartwright said yesterday he "didn't want to fight with the President." He said it was entirely possible the new bill might be modified before it passed the House. But he made clear he was seeking continuance of the full amount of the authorization.

"I know it looks sort of bad for me," he said, "but this bill is my baby. Naturally, I don't feel like destroying it."

Cartwright was joint sponsor of the original Hayden-Cartwright road authorization bill in 1934.

Won't Introduce Bills.

Last November 30, the President recommended Congress provide for cancellations of 1939 roads authorizations totaling $238,000,000 before January 1, 1938. He specifically requested that Congress limit authorizations for 1940 and the next few years following to not more than $125,000,000. He also asked elimination of requirements that the Secretary of Agriculture apportion roads funds annually among the States.

When the special session failed to act on the President's proposals, Secretary Wallace was forced the first of this year to apportion $214,000,000 of 1939 funds among the various States. But at the same time Wallace wrote each governor

Italians Taunt U.S. With 'Cowardice' In Panay Dispute

Rome (Wednesday), Jan. 5 (AP).—The newspaper Il Popolo Di Roma today accused the United States of cowardice in the Panay incident. The comment was made in discussing President Roosevelt's message to Congress.

Quoting the President's statement "the people of the United States and the Government of the United States have shown a capacity for restraint . . ." the newspaper declared: "No. They have shown they are afraid."

Thelengthy editorial reflected the growing displeasure in Italy against Roosevelt's condemnation of non-democratic governments and praise of democracy.

Diplomatic and naval codes were lost when Japanese bombs sank the gunboat Panay, but informed officials expressed belief yesterday they were safe from spying eyes.

Japan to Censor Shanghai Cables

Shanghai (Wednesday), Jan 5 (AP). Authoritative sources today disclosed Japanese officials had signified their intention of establishing censorship in Shanghai cable offices.

Such a step would end a period of freedom from any interference beginning when Chinese censors ceased to function after the fall of Shanghai.

The censorship disclosure came as the Chinese staff of the International Radio office walked out as a result of Japanese efforts to obtain control of Shanghai's air communications.

Plan Production as in NRA, Roosevelt Tells Industries; Bonus Started Slump—Eccles

Reserve Head Can't Put Lag on Industry 'Any More Than Labor.'

Favors Reduction Of Wages, Prices

1,500,000 Lost Jobs in Last 3 Months, Senators Are Told.

Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System told the Senate Unemployment Committee yesterday that "I cannot blame industry, any more than labor, for the business recession."

Eccles' statement contrasted with recent attacks on monopolistic phases of industry by wheelhorse orators of the Administration.

Blames Bonus Spending.

Eccles made six other major points:

1. That spending by the Government of $1,000,000,000 "would stop this recession."

2. That he is opposed to outright repeal of either the undistributed surplus profits tax (which he does not favor "in its present form") and the capital gains tax.

3. That payment of the soldiers' bonus in 1936 played a large part in bringing about the present recession by throwing recovery "out of balance" through creation of an "inflationary psychology."

4. That the principle of a "rainy-day reserve" is "good for the individual corporation but not for the whole national economy" as it "piles up idle money."

5. That "we could achieve stability now if both business and labor in this country would take a downward adjustment."

6. That "if we depend on monetary policy alone to stop the recession, we're going to be terribly disappointed."

Senators Shocked.

As to recession responsibility, Eccles said:

"I cannot blame industry for holding up price-levels when merely reducing prices is not going to give them capacity business. Naturally, they restrict production and maintain price-levels, in exactly the same way labor seeks to have its

Woman Showers Pepper on Enemy Of Mayor Hague

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—A woman sprayed a can of pepper on Arthur Garfield Hays, director of the American Civil Liberties Union, tonight as he was broadcasting in behalf of the C. I. O. an attack on Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City and other officials.

The broadcast was halted 30 seconds while the woman's screams went over the air. She fled and was not identified.

Hays said he and a few others were "pretty well showered" with pepper while the woman shouted, "It's a lie; Mayor Hague is the finest man I ever knew!"

Two Men Confess To Kidnaping of 4 On Christmas Eve

Indianapolis, Jan. 4 (AP).—State Police Superintendent Donald F. Stiver announced tonight two men caught at Muncie confessed the Christmas Eve kidnaping of four persons at Centerville, Ind.

Stiver said the men were William Chester Marcum, 30, of New Castle, Ind., and Harry C. Walters, 50, of Muncie, Ind.

British to Stage Giant Singapore Maneuvers

Blames Industry No More Than Labor

Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board yesterday declared that payment of the soldiers' bonus in 1936 helped to create a price distortion which pushed recovery out of balance and led toward the current business recession. He appeared before the Senate committee studying unemployment.

Wage-Hour Regulation Sought In Anti-Monopoly Legislation

Senator O'Mahoney Declares Corporate Licensing Law Offers Best Vehicle for Enforcing Regulations to Benefit Labor.

Proposals that antimonopoly legislation be made the vehicle for Federal wage regulation were advanced yesterday by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, coauthor with Senator William E. Borah of an antitrust bill.

While details of the Administration's antimonopoly plans awaited another Presidential message to Congress, O'Mahoney and Borah sought consideration of their joint measure for regulation of industry by Federal licensing of corporations.

O'Mahoney outlined his proposal for wages and hours regulation, as part of an antitrust program, following a conference with John J. Abt, a special assistant to Attorney General Cummings and head of the trial section of the Justice Department antitrust division.

At O'Mahoney's request, Cummings had designated Abt to study the Borah-O'Mahoney Federal licensing bill as part of his department's survey of possible antitrust measures. The Wyoming Senator, a former leading opponent of the President's court bill, declined to disclose the nature of yesterday's conference.

Meantime, Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House Labor Committee, announced a new drive to pass "the best possible wage-hour" bill through the House this session, in line with the President's recommendations.

The House last month shunted the wage-hour bill back to committee, dimming prospects of final action. Mrs. Norton called a meeting of her committee for next Wednesday. She denounced proposals for a "straight hours bill," devoid of wage regulation, as "ridiculous," and said she

Hudson Doubles Force to 12,000; To Make New Car

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Detroit, Jan. 4.—Doubling of the factory force of the Hudson Motor Car Co. to 12,000 employes, and beginning of production on a new car in the low-price field, were announced today by A. E. Barit, president.

In a bold gesture against the business recession, the 29-year-old auto firm disclosed plans for its new models to 200 editors and publishers from all over the country, gathered here at the company's invitation. Prices will be announced next week. Frankly hopeful that the move, which will set up the plant to full-time operation, will "do something about leading the way out of the recession," Barit said it would:

Furnish jobs for 6,000 more Hudson factory workers in a few weeks; increase the monthly pay roll by $1,250,000; bring an additional expenditure of $1,000,000 for materials, and stimulate sales for the 5,000 agencies selling Hudson products.

Spies in Hague's Own City Hall Inform C. I. O. of His Moves

This is the fourth and concluding article of a series describing Jersey City conditions in the light of conflict there between Mayor Frank Hague and John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

By Sidney Olson.
A Staff Correspondent.

Jersey City, N. J., Jan. 4.—"Sure, we've got rats in our organization. Every political machine has some. But we'll clean them out in good time."

John Gavin, right-hand man to Mayor Frank Hague and nominally registrar of wills for Hudson County, made this admission after revelation that persons within the Hague organization are corresponding constantly with officials of the Committee for Industrial Organization in the C. I. O. fight to organize in Jersey City.

Morris Ernst, C. I. O. counsel, revealed in New York that the letters were being received. While we were talking in his Madison avenue office, he interrupted an interview to open his mail.

Without comment, he tossed several of the letters across the desk. Three were on City Hall stationery, each from a separate department of the city government, and each signed. One contained a pledge to "top off" the C. I. O. to any moves by the mayor; one contained a copy of a previous day's message from the mayor's office, one said merely: "Keep up the good fight. We're with you."

Ernst said: "I began receiving these letters after a radio speech I made asking for letters from Jersey City citizens who were on our side, after promising not to reveal names. I never, frankly, expected to get any from Hague's own City Hall."

Gavin was unworried by the letters. He declared, "Frank Hague carries his plans around inside his own hat. These men, whoever they

Practice Lawful, President Holds

Condemns Jurisdictional Disputes Among Labor Groups.

Suggests That Leaders and U.S. Experts Chart Future Trends.

By Franklyn Waltman.

President Roosevelt yesterday projected the suggestion that much unintelligent and harmful business activity might be eliminated if industrial chieftains would sit down with Government representatives to chart probable demand, purchasing power, inventories and production for periods of six months or a year, as was done under the NRA codes.

Coming on the heels of ten days of intensive discussion over monopolistic practices and proposals for further governmental curbs on business, the President's suggestion caused surprise. This surprise resulted from the fact that what he proposed appeared to be so contrary to the objectives seemingly underlying the clamor of the last week.

Indeed, in some quarters the Roosevelt proposal was held to be no different from the experiments tried under NRA and since denounced as encouraging monopoly, although Mr. Roosevelt cautioned against assertions he was advocating immediately the re-enactment of the NRA.

Confusion Increased.

Mr. Roosevelt's remarks added to the general confusion, which began almost two weeks ago with Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson's antimonopoly speech, over the Administration's policy toward business. Just as the Jackson remarks were taken as an indication that the New Deal had swung away from planned economy toward a free competitive system, so Mr. Roosevelt's words were regarded as a return to theories of planned production.

If Mr. Roosevelt's suggestion prevails, the Federal antitrust laws in all probability would have to be relaxed as they were under NRA. The President conceded many persons believed the course of action he had suggested would violate the antitrust laws. But, he said, he regarded such action as perfectly legitimate as long as it was done without resort to price-fixing or steps to drive competitors out of business.

Some Fear Move.

Asked how production could be allocated under his plan, the President said that should not be done—that competition should be maintained.

He did not explain what would be the point of leaders in an industry together undertaking to chart probable consumer demand and determine on a production figure, if that production were not allocated among the units of the

Rumania to Keep Ties With France

Bucharest, Jan. 4 (AP).—Foreign Minister Micescu today declared Rumania's foreign policy—close coordination with France and the Little Entente—would remain unchanged by the recently formed government of Octavian Goga.

At the same time new government decrees were posted throughout the country. One from the labor ministry forbade any Christian housemaid under 40 years of age to work in a Jewish household.

Micescu said any domestic measures taken by the new government would have no reflection in the nation's foreign policy.

Senators Told 2 Banks Control Nearly All Rails

Sen. Wheeler Names Kuhn, Loeb and Morgan Firms in Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, of the Senate Railroad Finance Investigating Committee, yesterday asked the public and Government to "examine with great care the investment banking monopoly in New York City."

In the House, Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, asserted 24 banks, 13 of them in New York City, "control almost one-third of the banking resources of this country."

Winding up one phase of the Senate railroad investigation, Wheeler said: "Two financial houses, J. P. Morgan & Co. (with Morgan, Stanley & Co.), and Kuhn, Loeb & Co., share between them control of virtually all the financial business of our railroads."

Minority Leader Snell, of New York, interrupted Patman's speech to ask, "Will the gentleman give the country the whole picture, not just a part?" He requested Patman to give the names of controlling banks and corporations "to show the wide distribution of their control."

24 Banks Linked.

The records, Patman contended, showed an interlocking relationship between 24 "leading banks." In addition, he asserted, 175 corporations "own and control" approximately one-quarter of the total wealth of the Nation, which he estimates at $300,000,000,000.

Wheeler declared, "This notion that investment banking is a profession is continually used to protect the monopoly which these bankers have built up." He said Kuhn, Loeb & Co. "did handsomely from the standpoint of putting money in their own pockets" in connection with stock purchases by three railroad clients.

Earlier Benjamin J. Buttenweiser, Kuhn, Loeb partner, admitted he had "erred" in 1927 and 1928 by trading privately in Wabash Railway stock when his firm was financing purchases of the same stock for the Pennsylvania and the Delaware & Hudson railroads.

"I shouldn't have done it, and I very much regret that I did it," the youthful banker said. "I learned my lesson and I've never done it since."

Committee records, supplied by Kuhn, Loeb, showed that Buttenweiser invested about $125,000 in Wabash stock during 1927 and 1928 through his brother's account, clearing a profit of $5,042.21. At the time, Buttenweiser said, he was not a partner and "no partner of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. has ever engaged in such trading."

Public Was Victimized.

One of the roads, the Wabash, Wheeler said, now in receivership, "should never have bought the stock." "The public should never have been asked to buy the bonds, which are now in default."

C. E. Denny, president of the Erie Railroad, which Monday failed to meet some interest payments, conferred yesterday with Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, but received no encouragement in his efforts to obtain a $6,006,000 loan.

Asked if the loan was definitely out unless the Chesapeake & Ohio guaranteed it, Jones said: "I guess that's right. I do not expect further conferences with Mr. Denny regarding the loan."

Working for Washington

Gannon, New Leader, Proud Of Burleith Citizens' Record

MARTIN J. GANNON.

Stresses Accomplishments of Civic Group in Obtaining Streets and Other Projects; 200 Now Are Enrolled in Organization.

By Christine Sadler.

The Burleith Citizens Association has grown up with the Burleigh community. It was organized in 1924 by 12 of the first residents, and by 1925—when the neighborhood really got started—it had 110 members. Starting out when the vicinity was young, it has kept a close watch on its development, and has a sharp eye turned to the future.

Some of the problems which beset other associations are unknown to the Burleith members. There are no alleys to be cleared in the community, no new schools needed, and no complaints to be made about transportation.

As the new president, Martin J. Gannon, explains it: "We are enviably situated in relation to the downtown area. There is a large percentage of home ownership here and we are surrounded by schools, churches and park sites."

Helped Obtain Library.

Out of a possible 400 families, the association has a membership of about 200. The area is residential and its boundaries are Reservoir road, Wisconsin avenue, White Haven parkway and Thirty-ninth street.

Among accomplishments of the association is the work it has done in getting streets and other facilities for a new development. One of its best deeds, according to Gannon, was the co-operation it gave in obtaining the Georgetown library, which jointly serves the Burleith residents.

In the recent boosting of fares on buses and street cars, the community "came out ahead;" for it no longer has to pay a transfer fare.

With Security Board.

Gannon is a native of Rhode Island and still votes there. He has not made up his mind in regard to a vote for the District. He came to Washington in 1920 and is now connected with the Social Security Board in the Bureau of Old Age Insurance. He has held various Government jobs, and in between them has sold insurance and worked for the Red Cross.

He has been a member of the Burleith Citizens Association for seven years and was vice president before his recent elevation to the presidency.

Although silent about suffrage, Gannon does have some definite opinions about another controversial District subject—the sharing of governmental expenses between the Federal Government and District taxpayers.

Higher Taxes Held Unfair.

"I don't think the Federal Government shares nearly enough in the cost. It is because of this, I believe, that living costs are so high in Washington. Others have to make up in taxes what the Government fails to pay. The recent drastic increase in taxes seems to me unfair."

Gannon said that while attendance at citizens' association meetings at Burleith is not always as great as he would like to have it, "we can always count on the membership turning out when there is a vital issue coming up." The members are intensely interested in looking out for the welfare of their community and are on their toes when they consider it being jeopardized, he said.

"We are trying to work out programs interesting enough and vital enough to get them to the meetings every time there is one," he declared.

Attended Georgetown.

Gannon attended Georgetown University after coming to Washington and is a member of the Kappa Alpha Phi fraternity there. He likes reading and hiking, and is an ardent sports fan. Most of all, perhaps, he is a "Washington fan."

The Gannons have two children and live at 1310 Thirty-seventh street northwest.

On Friday—James G. Yaden, former president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

House Minority Keeps Ickes and Jackson Business Attacks Out of the Record.

The now famous attacks on big business by Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Assistant Attorney General Jackson were held out of the Congressional Record yesterday. House Republicans kept them out by objections.

But it may turn out a Pyrrhic victory for the embattled House minority, some of its number said. When members are denied permission to put speeches into the Record, they simply hand them over to Senate colleagues. Objections seldom are heard in the Senate.

Representative Maverick, liberal Texas Democrat, offered the Ickes speech for the Record. Promptly Representative Rich, Pennsylvania Republican, protested this was "the most assinine speech ever delivered by a public official."

"I object," came from Representative Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, and Maverick sat down.

Representative Caroline O'Day, New York Democrat, was next up, with a Jackson speech. This time, Minority Leader Snell wanted to know if Preisident Roosevelt approved the speech. Mrs. O'Day said she had received no word from the White House.

"I object," again came from Representative Wadsworth, and Mrs. O'Day sat down. Wadsworth said he objected "in view of the uncertainty as to the reliability of the speech."

One Republican violently differed with the political strategy of his minority colleagues—Representative Harold Knutson, of Minnesota. Knutson said the Ickes and Jackson speeches ought to be printed in the Record.

"They will make swell Republican campaign material," asserted the Minnesotan.

"I DON'T RECOLLECT," beamed Harry Parker, veteran colored messenger, "just what number they give this Congress. I just know I'm glad to be at it." He started Monday his sixty-fourth year of work at the Capitol.

Feet played a great part in the public life of this grandson of one of George Washington's servants. Polishing boots for legislators got him his first job. His own aching feet got him a Federal pension last year. Veteran attaches figured he would finish 1937 and then stop work.

But when the third session of the Seventy-fifth Congress convened—there was Harry at his old station, beside the doors of the House Ways and Means Committee.

He introduced two bills, one a companion to a measure by Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, proposing the investigation be made by the commission, and the other providing it be made by five House members to be named by the Speaker. Maverick said he offered the two measures so Congress could decide the kind of investigation it desired.

Reisinger Trial Halted to Test General's Mind

Military Court Grants Counsel's Plea for Examination.

A Staff Correspondent.

Quantico, Va., Jan. 4.—The court martial of Brig. Gen. Harold C. Reisinger, Marine Corps paymaster, was spectacularly halted here today when Reisinger's attorneys asked that the general be put under medical observation, and be examined mentally and physically.

Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson late yesterday afternoon acquiesced in the petition and ordered Reisinger to the Naval Hospital. The court-martial has been authorized to adjourn pending determination of the former Marine Corps paymaster's condition, naval officials said.

Jurisdiction Questioned.

Without specifically using the word "insanity," Reisinger's civil attorney, Charles Ford, of Washington, moved "that the accused may be placed under observation of medical authorities, in the manner prescribed by law, for the purpose of determining his mental capacity to conduct his defense in the case now before the court."

Reisinger's move came the moment before he was actually to go on trial charged with "exaggerating" his personal travel accounts, "inducing" a civilian and an officer to lend him money and displaying "conduct to the prejudice of the good order and discipline."

A day and a half of legal wrangling preceded the motion this morning. Ford and Maj. Merritt B. Curtis, Reisinger's military attorney, previously had argued that the general had not been duly warned of the charges to be placed against him, and that therefore the court-martial was without jurisdiction, and that the "conduct charge" was merely a duplication of the one concerning his personal accounts.

Objections Overruled.

Both objections by the defense were not allowed by the court, presided over by Maj. Gen. James C. Breckinridge, commandant of the Quantico Marine base.

Following adjournment of the trial, Gen. Reisinger refused to see reporters or pose for photographs. "I'm sorry to disappoint you," he said, "but I just can't stand any more." While Ford and Curtis were arranging for tomorrow's session, the general stared moodily across the Quantico grounds.

Ford said that Reisinger has been nervously upset ever since charges were first directed against him in October and that he has been under a physician's care pending the trial.

A native of Washington, Reisinger is a well-known figure in military circles. He is prominent in the Military Order of the Carabao, an organization of men who have served in the Philippines.

He was appointed paymaster of the Marine Corps March 1, 1936, for a four-year term.

Beginning his service as a paymaster clerk in the Navy in 1898, Reisinger resigned the same year and in 1900 was appointed a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps. He has been in service continuously since that time, and in 1926 became executive officer of the paymaster's department.

Reisinger's court-martial marks the first time that the Marine Corps has charged a high-ranking officer with a breach of military discipline since Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, now retired, was accused of making derogatory remarks about Premier Mussolini. Gen. Butler never faced trial.

Steel Co. Head Sees Slow Buying

Pittsburgh, Jan. 4 (AP).—John Lester Perry, new president of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, today predicted the Nation's large steel consumers will buy on a "hand-to-mouth" basis for the first few months of 1938.

At the same time the white-haired, 56-year-old executive of the U. S. Steel Corporation's largest subsidiary declared he believed business would "pick up soon."

He said he saw no indication that steel prices would drop in the near future.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF Public Opinion

Slight Drop in Roosevelt Popularity Shown by a Poll Since Trade Drop

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Jan. 4.—As Congress settles down to work in the midst of a Nation-wide economic recession, Senators, Representatives and political leaders of all parties are wondering what the business slump has done to President Roosevelt's popularity with the masses.

The latest survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion indicates that while the President still enjoys the support of a decisive majority of voters, his popularity curve is trending slightly downward at this time. The Institute's monthly index for December shows him polling 62.1 per cent of the major party vote as against more than 63 per cent last October.

The Institute index is based on results of a scientific sampling of public sentiment in all States, completed in late December by the organization's staff of more than 600 field reporters.

Translated into actual votes on the basis of the total cast in the Presidential election of 1936, the survey figure indicates that the President is approximately as strong today as when he was re-elected more than a year ago. Approximately 27,600,000 votes are for him today, judging by the survey index, and 16,800,000 against him. In the 1936 election he polled 27,751,612 to Landon's 16,681,913.

The survey results are not a measurement of third term sentiment. Another poll showing how many voters would like to see Roosevelt run again in 1940 is now being completed by the Institute.

Opposition Not Effective.

While it is clear that the business slump has pulled the President's popularity down since October, the survey indicates that New Deal opposition is not sufficently coalesced to draw supporters away from Roosevelt in great numbers.

The Republicans have yet to offer a program which appeals to the middle and lower third of the population or to voters of the younger age groups. There lies Roosevelt's chief popular strength.

A majority of voters polled in the upper one-third of the population, economically speaking, are anti-Roosevelt. But such groups as skilled and unskilled wage earners, and white collar workers remain loyal to the Roosevelt banner. The survey found that 72 per cent of wage earners and 62 per cent of white collar workers are still in favor of the President.

Enthusiasm Cooling.

Even though most Democrats who voted for Roosevelt in 1936 are not deserting him, nevertheless the survey indicates some cooling of their enthusiasm for the President. Of Democrats the Institute asked: "Are you more for President Roosevelt now or less for him than you were at election time?"

The majority, over 70 per cent, indicate no change in attitude. But of the remaining, who say their sentiments have changed, those less in favor of him far outnumber those more in favor of him. The results boil down to the fact that about one-fifth of all the Democrats who voted for Roosevelt in 1936 are less enthusiastic about him today, although they are not yet ready to desert him.

Losses Parallel Business.

The President's sectional losses in popularity are greater in the areas where the pinch of the business slump has been felt the most. In a recent survey in which the Institute asked "Have you noticed any decline in business in your community during the last two months?" the affirmative vote was lowest on the Pacific Coast, highest in the New England and East Central areas. This week's Presidential popularity survey shows the President down from one to two points in the New England and East Central States and up two points along the Pacific Coast.

For Roosevelt.

	Nov. 1937	Today	Pts. Chge
New England	57%	55%	—2
Mid-Atlantic	61	60	—1
East Central	58	57	—1
West Central	64	61	—3
South	76	75	—1
Rocky Mntn.	61	64	+3
Pacific Coast	68	70	+2

In the last Presidential election, Landon's vote was heavy in the hamlets and small towns—places which have long been traditionally Republicans. Today's survey indicates that the small towns are still the least in favor of Roosevelt, and therefore, the most fertile field for the G. O. P. to cultivate.

Glass, 80, Tells His Friends 'I'd Rather Be 40'

Morgenthau Heads Callers; More Than 500 Wires, Notes Received.

(Picture—Page 15.)
By the Associated Press.

Senator Carter Glass observed his eightieth birthday anniversary yesterday surrounded by his family and amid a shower of congratulatory messages and floral tributes.

The vigorous little Virginian, affectionately called the "Unreconstructed Rebel" by President Roosevelt, had only one complaint:

"I'd rather be 40 than 80," he said.

He had expressed the wish that the occasion be a quiet one. Long before noon, however, messengers began to arrive at his apartment with telegrams and flowers and high officials of the Government came to pay their respects.

Secretary Morgenthau called to congratulate him in person, as did members of the Federal Reserve Board.

"I don't want to burst into print on my birthday," he told newspapermen, who asked for a statement. "Whatever I have to say I can say any other day in the year."

He did consent, however, to pose with Morgenthau "although I promised myself a year ago I would never have my picture taken again."

More than 500 telegrams, letters and cards were delivered to his hotel. Flowers filled every available bit of space in his apartment. He appeared particularly proud of two large baskets of flowers from the staffs of his two newspapers in Lynchburg, Va.

There was only one planned event for the day—a small dinner last night in his honor given by members of his immediate family. A huge birthday cake, topped by 80 candles, was prepared for it.

The Senator proudly called attention to the fact that the day was not his alone. Nancy Carter Boatwright, his niece, was 13 years old yesterday, and it was also the wedding anniversary of his daughter, Mrs. I. Watlington Diggs, of New York. Both were here for the birthday dinner.

The Senate was not in session, so tributes prepared by political friends and foes—differences of opinion were forgoteen to honor the Senate's "grand old man"—were delayed. They will come today.

Trust Case Dismissal Up in House Committee

By the Associated Press.

The House Judiciary Committee will consider tomorrow Attorney General Cummings' criticism of Federal Judge F. A. Gieger, of Milwaukee, for dismissing a grand jury which considered charges of anti-trust law violations brought by the Government against three automobile finance companies.

Chairman Sumners (Democrat), Texas, said he would submit Cummings' letter to the committee to decide whether to call Judge Geiger for a hearing.

Court Dismisses Suit Based Upon Trial's Broadcast

Salem, Oreg., Jan. 4 (AP).—The Oregon Supreme Court today affirmed the dismissal of a $75,000 libel suit which developed from a radio broadcast of courtroom proceedings.

Mrs. Josephine Irwin claimed her reputation was damaged when David R. Vandenberg, defense attorney at the murder trial of Marion Meyerle, broadcast his closing arguments to the jury over Station KFJI, operated by George Kincaid.

The Supreme Court refused to rule on whether it was proper to broadcast court trials, asserting "the American Bar Association frowns upon such practice. It is a matter for the determination of the trial judge."

Willkie, president of the Commonwealth & Southern Power Co., Thursday on a radio program (N. B. C. at 9:30 p. m., C. S. T.) and said a debate with Javits would only be a duplication.

Japanese Seize City and Tomb Of Confucius

Protection Promised to 40,000 Descendants of Philosopher.

By the United Press

Shanghai, Jan. 4.—Japan's northern army, rolling arose rich Shantung Province toward the railroad terminus of Suchow, tonight was reported to have seized the ancient tomb of Confucius, sage of China, who exalted ancestor worship.

Fleets of airplanes aided in the capture of Kufow, place of Confucius' birth and burial five centuries before Christ, the Domei (Japanese) News Agency announced. The Japanese were said to have ordered full protection for the tomb, situated at the head of an avenue of cypress trees on the town's outskirts.

Commanders of the Japanese forces promised protection to descendants of Confucius—now known by the family name of Kung—of whom between 40,000 and 50,000 are said to be in Kufow and nearby Yenchow.

A Japanese spokesman said the Shantung assault had reached Tawenko, 25 miles south of Taian, and a point 6 miles south of Feiching, west of Tsinan, Shantung capital. Domei's correspondent at Taian said the Japanese were extending their lines toward the almost totally wrecked city of Tsingtao in an effort to thwart a Chinese retreat.

The next large city in the path of the drive on Suchow is Yenchow.

Japanese predicted Suchow would fall with slight resistance, and that the Japanese drive immediately would be extended to Chengchow and thence to Hankow.

In central China, Hankow was subjected to a destructive air raid when nearly 40 Japanese planes raided the airdrome.

Five Japanese warships, using Quemoy as their base, bombarded Amoy on the south central Chinese coast midway between Shanghai and Canton late yesterday, according to the Central (Chinese) News Agency.

Chinese military officials reported a full company of Manchuko troops had mutinied against their Japanese officers south of Taiyuan, capital of Shansi Province, and had joined Chinese guerrillas.

Japanese here denied Chinese reports that Hangchow, 115 miles southwest of Shanghai, was recaptured last week. A foreign traveler who left Hangchow two days ago reported the Japanese were in complete control.

Liberation Demanded.

Tokyo, Jan. 4 (AP).—Admiral Nobumasa Suyetsugu, Japan's home minister, believes world peace today awaits "liberation" of the world's colored races from the shackles of white supremacy.

The minister's recent assertion was made public by Kaizo magazine.

"The supremacy of white nations should be so altered to bring about the emancipation of the colored races without which there will not be the humanity or justice so frequently lauded by whites," he said.

"I believe there will be no world peace unless those colored races at present suffering from white pressure be liberated. I do not know when this will be realized, but I do not hesitate to make this prophecy."

Japanese Raise Issue.

Shanghai (Wednesday), Jan. 5 (AP).—Japanese officials here raised what a foreign authority called a "grave issue" today by threatening to take action in Shanghai's International Settlement unless "anti-Japanese outrages" were stopped.

The "issue" was raised following an official protest by Japanese officials to the Shanghai Municipal Council against Chinese terrorist acts.

A study of unemployment was opened yesterday by a special Senate committee which called Government experts to testify on current conditions. Committeemen are Senators Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (left), Carl A. Hatch, James F. Byrnes, chairman; James J. Davis and James E. Murray. Isador Lubin (right), commissioner of labor statistics, told the committee the drop in employment between October and mid-December was sharper than that following the 1929 crash. He said between 1,475,000 and 1,550,000 persons lost their jobs in that period.

Wife Snatched From Hospital, Survives Birth

Baby Also Lives Although Mate Took Woman From Doctors.

By the United Press.

Wichita, Kans., Jan. 4.—Ben Couch burst into a hospital operating room today, drew a knife and took his wife from an operating table before a doctor could administer ether and deliver her second baby.

Five minutes after Couch reached home with his wife in a taxi, the baby, a girl who was named Irilla, was born without medical aid.

The 34-year-old mother gave birth to the baby alone in the family's two-room shack while the father had gone for help. Later Dr. L. B. Putnam, summoned by police, said both mother and 5-pound baby were doing well.

Mrs. Couch said her husband had been ill recently. They have one other child, a girl of 13. Couch is unemployed.

Couch, 35, told police he objected to use of ether, which Dr. C. W. Miller was preparing to administer to relieve Mrs. Couch, a charity patient.

"I've got my wife and baby, too," Couch said, "and they're both safe. Maybe I wouldn't have had either of them if I had left her at the hospital."

He said he rushed into the operating room, saw that Dr. Miller was preparing to administer the anesthetic, and shouted:

"You can't give her that medicine."

"Get out of here and stay out," Dr. Miller told him, and motioned for several nurses and an interne to remove Couch.

Couch drew a knife and said:

"You'll either get that baby without medicine or I take my wife home."

Dr. Miller finally said: "All right, I wash my hands of the case. She's your wife."

"I've been operated on," Couch told the doctor. "They told me ether wouldn't hurt me, either, but I've never gotten over the effects."

Rebels Report Teruel Entry, Aided by Italy

But Madrid Insists Foes Have Been Checked; 20,000 Casualties.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Jan. 4.—Insurgent columns, smashing through three lines of snow-covered loyalist trenches behind a fleet of Italian whippet tanks, were reported tonight to have entered the walled city of Teruel from the west.

Insurgent headquarters at Saragozza said battalions, under the command of Gen. Miguel Aranda, moved across the frozen Turia River under artillery fire after driving down the Saragozza-Teruel highway from Concud in a three-day battle that cost heavy casualties for every foot of ground. Insurgents said the frozen ground and crusted snow were ideal for the tank attack.

An insurgent communique said 11 loyalist fighting planes were brought down in flames in fighting west of the city.

Loyalist dispatches at the frontier insisted government forces had forced the enemy to a standstill in the deep snows of the Albarracin foothills two miles north of Teruel.

Wiping Out Rebels.

Loyalists said they were "methodically" wiping out resistacne by the remnants of a rebel garrison in the "old quarter" of the town and were confident that a few hundred rebels—there are women and children with them—inside the Hotel De Aragon and old seminary would be annihilated during the night.

The six-day battle, heaviest of the 18-month civil war, was reported to have crowded field and base hospitals with 20,000 casualties, as many due to exposure as to the rain of death from artillery, machine guns and airplanes.

Many Starved to Death.

Madrid, Jan. 4 (AP).—Weak from starvation, combatants and noncombatants alike were removed today on stretchers from the government palace at Teruel.

Government dispatches from the city, east of Madrid, said many children were among survivors who had spent three weeks huddled in an underground refuge at the palace. Their last seven days were without food and water. Many had starved to death and those brought out alive were in a dazed condition.

Several homes were converted into hospital wards, but authorities said little could be done to relieve the suffering because of a lack of heat, food and physicians. They said operations were impossible.

Paris, Jan. 4 (AP).—The foreign ministry tonight announced it had protested to Spanish insurgent authorities in Irun against the arrest of the French consular agent there, and demanded his release.

6 Die as Milan-London Plane Crashes in Reich

Frankfort on the Main, Germany, Jan. 4 (AP).—Three passengers and three crew members, all Germans, were killed today when a Milan-London transport plane crashed on landing here.

Bonus Started Slump—Eccles; Created Inflation Psychology

Reserve Chairman Tells Senators He 'Can Not Blame Industry Any More Than Labor for Recession;' Urges Wage, Price Cuts.

The testimony of the slim, sharp-eyed Utahan, that payment in 1936 of nearly $2,000,000,000 to war veterans was in great measure responsible for the present business recession, appeared to shock several members of the committee. Senator Bennett C. Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, ardent bonus advocate, flushed even redder under his new Florida sunburn, and thereafter questioned Eccles sharply.

Eccles amplified his point by tracing the financial history of 1936 as including a tremendous expansion of private spending and bank credit while the Government was sending billions of dollars into pump-priming channels. The bonus payment, topping all this spending, was "unfortunate," Eccles said.

He added:

"The Government was borrowing heavily to take care of its relief and public works programs. Private business was borrowing to expand. We were all going the same way.

"Now if the bonus payment had been made in 1934 it would have compensated for a certain lack of activity in both private and Government expenditures.

"The inflationary psychology that developed in 1936 was followed by a desire in many people to convert money into things in the belief that prices were going higher. People bought not for current needs, but for future needs."

Clark snapped swiftly, "Isn't that exactly what the Government tried to encourage in the NRA? Isn't that the whole history of the NRA?"

Eccles circled this question by asserting his intent first to complete his explanation of the workings of the inflationary tendencies. He continued by stating that increased costs discouraged the construction of homes, saying: "Building for rental became an unprofitable venture.

"Incomes generally did not increase as fast as prices. Rentals and construction costs went up. Farm crops were abundant and highly priced. We find recovery getting out of balance. Strikes came in labor, many business interests felt prices would go up and, while a backlog of orders piled up, inventories were over-extended.

"While this went on in private activity, the Government commenced to reduce its spending, lessening its contribution to the community buying power. The failure of production and employment to expand brought about a contraction of credit. With its decline, values went down. Loans came under pressure for payment."

In tracing the reduction of Government expenditures he noted that in 1936 the Government spent $3,500,000,000 more than it collected, including the bonus, while in 1937 it spent only $400,000,000 more than it collected.

Of the corporate surplus profits tax, he noted that its repeal would be "the most deflationary thing that could happen." He said he favored its principle, but indorsed an exemption of about $15,000 to $20,000 of the fixed amount of reserves a corporation might retain without taxation. He said this would exempt 90 per cent of the country's businesses and enable "smaller corporations which do not use the corporate structure as a means of tax evasion to operate normally."

Of the capital gains tax, he said it "has not proved a restraining factor. It is difficult for me to see why a person purchasing securities in a depression bottom, as in 1932, and carrying them until they appreciate 100 to 1,000 per cent, is then privileged to sell those securities without paying their share of taxes. Speculators of that type contribute nothing to the wealth or well-being of the Nation."

Outlining the possibilities if the inactive gold in the Treasury were desterilized, he said:

"If the gold were desterilized and the fund used to retire the debt created when the fund was begun it would decrease the Government debt correspondingly and increase bank reserves on the other hand, while it would not increase consumer buying power nor bank deposits.

"If gold were desterilized, deposited in the Reserve system and the Government then used those funds in spending, it would increase bank deposits, increase reserves and be a reflationary action."

In declaring increased buying power is the most urgent need today, Eccles appeared to favor reversion by the Administration to heavy pump-priming expenditures, although he remarked he was making no recommendations to the committee.

1,500,000 Lose Jobs.

He did say, however, that some way must be found to increase the buying power of unorganized workers and farmers. He stressed that business and labor, especially in the building industry, where he said labor costs were too high, must make some adjustments to set costs back to where they were before the 1936 advance.

Dr. Isador Lubin, of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and Frank Persons, of the Employment Service, both of the Labor Department, and Corrington Gill, assistant administrator of the Works Progress Administration, were other Government officials appearing at the hearing.

Lubin said that the unemployment rise from October to December was the sharpest in recent history. He estimated 1,500,000 persons lost their jobs during the quarter as compared with 1,400,000 in 1929, while 850,000 less persons had jobs last December than in December, 1936.

Gill reported WPA relief rolls rose from 1,520,000 persons on November 1 to 1,677,000 on January 1. He told the committee the WPA is providing for all of the needy unemployed, reconciling this with the jobless census total of 11,000,000 by asserting that many people out of work do not seek WPA help and others are barred from relief if some member of the family is on full-time employment.

Persons said his records showed a total of unemployed people of 4,168,000, but admitted his figures are incomplete.

The disappearance of Gertrude Bennett, 17 (right), daughter of Harry Bennett, personal director for the Ford Motor Co. at Detroit, stirred fears she had been kidnaped by her father's enemies. Yesterday it was revealed she had eloped to Auburn, Ind., with Russell Hughes, 21-year-old college musician. No trace has been found of the couple since.

Britain Insists On Partitioning Of Palestine

Opposition of Lord Peel However, May Require Boundary Changes.

By the United Press.

London, Jan. 4.—The British government tonight announced its determination to carry out its proposed partition of Palestine into sovereign Jewish and Arab states, despite widespread disorders and bloodshed resulting from its original announcement last July.

A "white paper" issued by the foregin office revealed, however, that opposition to the plan, developed by a British royal commission led by Lord Peel, might necessitate boundary changes as well as "temporary cantonization or separate mandates for the Jewish and Arab States."

Inquirers to Be Sent.

The announcement repeated the government's statement of policy last July expressing general agreement with the royal commission's report and asserting the scheme of tri-partite division appeared to be the "most hopeful solution of the problem."

It was announced a new commission would be sent to the Holy Land—virtual martial law exists there under the rule of 10,000 British troops—to investigate methods of putting the partition scheme into effect.

The government emphasized, however, that it was not committed to details of the original plan of establishing Jewish and Arab states with a neutral British mandate for the holy places of Jerusalem, Bethlehem and Nazareth.

Anxiety Is Voiced.

Jerusalem, Jan. 4 (AP).—Arab and Jewish leaders expressed dissatisfaction and anxiety tonight over the British plan to send a new technical commission to the Holy Land to study the practical problems of partitioning Palestine.

Some Arad leaders threatened to boycott the commission when it arrived. In Jewish circles there was marked anxiety that London's "dilatoriness" would permit continuation of the present state of suspense and terrorism, which has cost many lives and damaged the country economically.

Reich to Resume Airship Service to U. S. in 5 Months

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 4.—German airship service between Europe and the United States will be resumed in about five months with a sister ship of the Zeppelin Hindenburg, which plummeted to earth in flames at Lakehurst, N. J., last May.

Inflated with American non-inflammable helium instead of the hydrogen which buoyed up the Hindenburg, the new ship, the LZ-130 will make three round trips a month until autumn, when seasonal operations will be terminated, it was announced today by Edward P. Farley, president of the American Zeppelin Transport Corporation, General United States agent for the German operators of the craft.

The LZ-130, dimensionally identical with the Hindenburg, has a flying range of 7,000 miles. Because helium has less liftin; power than hydrogen, the new ship will be able to carry only 40 passengers, as against 70 accommodated by the Hindenburg.

New Road Bill To Ignore Cut By Roosevelt

Cortwright Will Introduce Measure to Continue Present Funds.

a letter explaining he was forced by the law to apportion the money and asking governors to withhold allocations until Congress had a chance to act.

Cartwright said this was "unusual action" for a Cabinet official.

The Oklahoma Roads Committee chairman also disclosed yesterday he had failed to introduce two measures sent to the Speaker last session by Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Secretary Wallace, and turned over to him. The bills would have applied the cuts recommended by the President to roads under supervisions of the Agriculture and Interior departments.

"They won't be introduced, unless someone else does it," the Oklahoman said.

The President on November 22 wrote Cartwright a letter in reply to one written by the Roads Committee chairman explaining why he had not called and did not intend to call a special session committee meeting. Cartwright explained the House was "unusually busy," and a majority of committee members believed "nothing would be 'accomplished by a meeting at this time."

The President replied that "more than 3,000 counties in the United States are glad to get every possible expenditure of Federal funds within their counties, but I know you will agree with me that if we legislated with that as the principal objective in mind, there would not be any Democratic Party and there would not be any solvent Government after a few years."

Modeled closely along the lines of the 1938 and 1939 road authorizations to which the President objected, Cartwright said the new bill he plans to introduce this week would "simply carry on" the present roads policy.

Authorizing $238,000,000 each for 1940 and 1941, the measure in its tentative form would provide $125,000,000 for regular Federal highway aid, $50,000,000 for elimination of grade crossings, $25,000,000 for farm-to-market roads—and the balance for National park and forest roads.

Cartwright said he has tentatively scheduled committee hearings on the measure for January 25, and "it will then be up to the committee what we do."

"Road construction keeps a lot of people at work who would otherwise be on relief," he said. "If we had made the cuts the President asked, it would have forced a lot of people on relief. The savings made would not be a drop in the bucket. They wouldn't balance the budget and they wouldn't go far toward doing it.

"If percentage cuts in other appropriations are decided on—and I am willing to make them up to 20 or 25 per cent—then I will favor the same reductions in roads money. But I am unwilling to single out roads, unless all items are treated alike."

Plan Production to Supply Probable Need as Was Done in NRA, Roosevelt Tells Industries, Offering Help of U. S. Experts industry. Those familiar with such problems hold that allocation of production, either by law or agreement, constitutes a step toward price-fixing.

President Believes This Procedure Would Be Within Law.

Nor did Mr. Roosevelt specifically say he would propose a relaxation of the anti-trust laws to permit such action. He said he had not reached that point yesterday. In his message to Congress Monday, Mr. Roosevelt said he would send a special message to Congress proposing revision of laws regarding the relationship of Government to business. He said yesterday that message would go forward in two or three weeks.

Urges Labor to Act.

Meanwhile, in the press conference at which the President projected his idea for a new system of planned industrial production, he called upon organized labor to show a greater sense of responsibility, especially by ending jurisdictional disputes which hamper economic activity.

He said labor's responsibility was growing but that further improvement was needed. He added that before any legislation defining labor's responsibility was attempted, labor, like business, would be given a chance to correct the evils in its house.

Earlier in the day an authority close to Mr. Roosevelt indicated the latter was pleased over the response to his message to Congress—that the response was as favorable as any the President had received from a speech since the beginning of the New Deal. This source indicated the tenor of the President's Jackson Day dinner speech Saturday night would depend in large part on the willingness business shows to abandon the practices condemned by Mr. Roosevelt in his message.

"Top Layer" Is Silent.

From this quarter came the impression that Mr. Roosevelt did not regard his message as nearly so conciliatory as it was interpreted and generally thought—that actually the President had declared war on a numerical minority of business, which is the top group dominating business, that is, about 100 corporations doing 65 per cent of the Nation's business. It is this segment of business that is guilty of the unfair and dishonest practices Mr. Roosevelt condemned in his message, it was explained.

The President, this friend added, conceives it to be his role to protect the overwhelming majority of honest but small businessmen from being squeezed by the monopolsits at the top and the sweat shop chiselers at the bottom of the industrial structure. The top layer of monopolists have not yet applauded the address, it was said.

Be all this as it may, Mr. Roosevelt at his press conference indicated he was pursuing an economic philosophy somewhat different from that of Assistant Attorney General Jackson, who has led the fight for the Federal Government to take steps against monopolistic practices. Nor do their objectives seem to be the same—for Mr. Roosevelt, as evidenced by his press conference remarks, appears to be seeking a planned industrial production under Government auspices in order to stabilize business activity, while Jackson's aim appears to be a free, competitive market, brought about by abolishing the controls and combinations which freeze price-levels and production.

Lauds Motor Move.

The President launched into a discussion of this problem when he was asked to comment on announcement by the Hudson Motor Car Co. that it will double its present working force and spend $11,000,000 in the next few weeks in the production of a new, low-priced automobile. He replied that was excellent—that he hoped there would be more such announcements recalling men back to work.

Then without further urging, Mr. Roosevelt said that recalled to him a recent automobile ride during which he visited a garage owned by an old friend named Bill, with whom he played baseball as a youth. He said he asked Bill how he was getting along and that Bill replied he was getting along too well.

How was that? the President said he inquired. Bill responded that there were about 100 automobiles owned in the community and that each owner, on the average, bought a new automobile once each three years. But in the last year the President quoted Bill as saying 62 automobiles had been sold in the community—that he had sold one-half of them himself.

Why was that so bad, the President said he wanted to know. Bill, he added, explained that if 62 automobiles were bought in one year, instead of about 30, which was normal, he would not sell more than ten automobiles in the next year. Why were so many automobiles bought, the President said he asked. Bill explained the factory was pushing the dealers, had told the dealers to put on a little high-pressure salesmanship and tell prospective customers automobiles would cost $100 more in another year, according to Mr. Roosevelt. That caused some people to buy cars.

Steel Production Follows.

Moreover, the factory had authorized more liberal credit terms, Bill told the President. Whereas payments spread over 18 months were the previous maximum, automobiles could now be sold with 24 months in which to pay. That meant, the President said Dill told him, that a family which would balk at buying a new car if the monthly payment was $40, would willingly buy it at a monthly payment of $30. Bill said, Mr. Roosevelt explained, that they had been pushing the cars too fast.

And then, Mr. Roosevelt went on, a large steel manufacturer—unidentified by him—came in the other day and the President asked him to explain why steel production dropped from some 90 per cent of plant capacity to 28 per cent. The steel magnate replied that the slump in automobile production had been one factor in steel's decline.

Another was the fact that the railroads undertook to buy a full year's supply of rails at one time, so the steel mills were kept busy all summer turning out steel rails seven days a week and making deliveries and how the railroads did not want any more rails for nine months, Mr. Roosevelt quoted the steel master as explaining.

Mr. Roosevelt said he asked this steel man what he thought of such action and that the latter said he thought it was highly unintelligent.

But could the Government do anything to prevent such unintelligent action, a correspondent asked the President. Yes, said Mr. Roosevelt, he thought the Government could be helpful. Now, he added, he did not want anyone running out and writing a story that he was advocating immediate re-enactment of the NRA.

Practice Under Codes.

But the fact remained, he continued, that under quite a number of the codes it was perfectly legal for the heads of industries to sit down around a table with the Government and figure out from their own statistics and the statistics of the Government much more clearly as an industry than ever before what the probable demand would be for six months or a year ahead.

They could make a much more intelligent group estimate as to the purchasing power of the country and the inventories for the immediate future so that they won't overproduce, said the President. To him, he said, that is perfectly legitimate, so long as it is done without price-fixing and without competitors being run out of business.

President Roosevelt said that today there was a question whether under the anti-trust laws that kind of thing was legal and that a number of industrialists were afraid to try it. But, he repeated, he saw nothing wrong in these industrialists sitting around the table with the Government and figuring demand, purchasing power and inventories with the help of the Government in order to plan their production.

But how could the estimated annual production be allocated around an industry, the President was asked.

Don't do that, asserted the President, adding that competition should be maintained.

Will the President recommend a change in the anti-trust laws to permit the sort of thing he had described?

Mr. Roosevelt said he had not reached that point yet. Asked when he would send to Congress the special message proposing revisions in the laws relating to business, the President said not for two or three weeks.

Asked to elaborate on the reference in his Monday message to Congress regarding the need for assuming responsibility by labor organizations, Mr. Roosevelt said he believed there was a need for further responsibility in that quarter and that its assumption by labor unions was growing. He pointed out that some unions, notably the Ladies' Garment Workers, now make public a tabulation of their receipts and disbursements.

In England, he went on, there is greater responsibility on the part of labor unions but that there the labor movement was much farther advanced than here—that what is occurring here now happened in England 10, 15 or 20 years ago. The labor movement here was going through growing pains but that given time he felt sure it would increase its assumption of responsibility.

What was his attitude toward legislation imposing specific responsibilities on labor organizations? he was asked.

That was a difficult question, Mr. Roosevelt responded. He went on to assert that labor needed some device for settling quickly and without hampering progress jurisdictional disputes. He cited the case of Portland, Oreg. millworkers, where the American Federation of Labor carpenters union claimed jurisdiction but where a C. I. O. union also claimed the right to represent the workers.

As a result, he said, not only was work stopped in the Portland lumber mills but that American Federation of Labor carpenters on the East Coast were told they could not use redwood shipped out of Portland.

That sort of thing had to be stopped, the President said, with labor facing the problem of working out a method for the settlement of such disputes. Did he believe that the desired improvement could be brought about by legislation? Well, he was willing to give labor the same chance to correct its evils as he was giving to business before any legislation is sought, Mr. Roosevelt replied, bringing his press conference to an end.

Condemns Jurisdictional Disputes Among Labor Unions.

Count Abandons Lectures on Advice of Secret Police.

By the United Press.

Berlin, Jan. 4.—Count Hermann Keyserling, philosopher and writer, has canceled a lecture engagement in the United States on the "advice" of the Gestapo, the Nazi secret police, it was learned today.

Count Keyserling was to have sailed for New York late in December. Two weeks before his sailing date, it was learned, he was "advised" not to go.

The first reports of the cancelation came last night. They said that "for reasons of health" the count had decided to cancel. Then it was added that it appeared doubtful whether he would be able to accept an invitation for a later date. As the count is in the Black Forest, apparently in good health, this statement caused speculation.

Count Keyserling last lectured in Berlin November 1. Then, addressing an audience of prominent people, including members of the aristocracy, on "Inner Experience and Outward Fate," he said that the grandfathers of the men who are young today had lots of initiative.

As an aside, he added:

"If one meets today an American who is completely tired, he is an American of the third generation."

Count Keyserling was to have been the speaker at Town Hall here Sunday. Mrs. Richard V. Oulahan, Town Hall director, said the cancelation was announced by the count's New York agent.

Power Hearing Set, $1,000,000 Rate Cut Hinted

Utilities Body Will Weigh 'Sliding Scale' Profits on Electricity.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday set January 25 for formal hearing on the rate of return to be allowed the Potomac Electric Power Co. on "property used and useful for the convenience of the public."

Possibility that a slash of $1,000,000 in electric rates may result was seen by officials.

Although the P. U. C. did not enlarge on proposals for a new basic rate of return, it was indicated the commission was ready to cut the rate from 6½ to 6 per cent under the sliding scale plan, which provides for the rate to be fixed annually.

Last year a similar order by the P. U. C. resulted in a reduction of $504,021. It was estimated that if the present rate were cut from 6½ to 6 per cent consumer savings would amount to nearly $1,000,000.

In operation since 1924, the sliding scale arrangement fixed the rate at that time at 7.5 per cent. Later it was reduced to 7 per cent and two years ago to the present 6½ per cent.

Anti-Monopoly Law May Carry Pay-Hr. Clause

O'Mahoney Proposes Putting Labor Rules in 'Trust' Bill.

A Senate in recess, and a House in an oratorical blow-off, yesterday awaited inactively today's budget message from the President. A conference on the housing bill was slated, and then called off. But conferees on the Administration's farm bill reported the first "progress" since widely conflicting crop control measures were passed last month by House and Senate.

First, the farm bill conferees threw open to change the Boileau-McNary "dairy-livestock" amendment adopted in nearly identical form by both Houses, over Administration opposition. Leaders expressed fear at the time the amendment, designed to bar new dairy competition from the South, might "wreck" the bill. Conferees declined to disclose how the amendment might be altered.

Chairman Ellison D. Smith, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said the conference group also decided to give farmers complete control over electing local county committees to administer the revamped soil conservation program.

Urging that the Borah-O'Mahoney Federal licensing bill be considered in whatever antitrust program if formulated, Senator O'Mahoney yesterday said he was not insistent on the present form of the licensing measure and courted helpful amendments.

The bill would place administration of the law under an enlarged Federal Trade Commission, and prohibit corporations from doing an interstate commerce business without first obtaining a Federal license. Licenses could be revoked after hearings if corporations failed to comply with existing Federal regulations, or if they employed child labor, interfered with collective bargaining, discriminated against women employes or engaged in unfair trade practices.

O'Mahoney said he believed "the Administration's wages and hours objectives could be more adequately attained through this medium than through any other."

He pointed to a provision of the bill authorizing the commission to recommend to Congress minimum wage levels for the lower-paid types of workers. The commission would be empowered to make such recommendations when it found that "abuses" existed "in the form of low wage scales." Wage minimums would be recommended only after collective bargaining methods had failed to eliminate "abuses."

Early Action Seen On District Reform

Representative Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, will not be on hand today when the House District Committee meets for the first time since last summer, but some of his colleagues indicated they will take up the cudgels in his behalf.

Dirksen, who was angered Monday when he learned he had been left off the two sub-committees he was especially interested in, declared he would bring the "slight" by Chairman Palmisano to the attention of the whole committee. He thought at the time the meeting would not be held until next Wednesday.

Meanwhile, other members of the committee complained they had not been consulted as to their assignments.

At least two Republican members and possibly one or more Democrats said they expected to voice their objections when the committee met.

Dirksen said he had no intention of letting the matter drop, declaring he still wanted a place on the fiscal affairs and utility sub-committees.

Vain Hunt Made For Blood Donor To Save Ill Man

Efforts to find a blood donor for Fred H. Gauss, gravely ill at Georgetown Hospital with a streptococcus infection of the heart, were fruitless late last night while physicians said the infection usually was fatal unless treated by transfusion of blood from a person who had recovered from the disease. They said many donors had been tested, but none had been found suitable.

Earlier in the day a call for blood donors was issued by Dr. Wallace M. Yater and Gauss' brother. Late last night Gauss still fought the infection without help from the only source doctors said it could come.

Confesses Murder

radio while the two women came in.

He confronted them with a gun found in an upstairs room, the confession stated. They screamed and began to run through the house. Bowers eventually cornered the terrified pair, from whom he took $11 and some change.

Struck Girl With Pistol.

"He then marched them upstairs to the bedroom, taking a piece of rope he had found in the basement," the F. B. I. summary of the confession stated. "Ordering Mrs. Carpenter to tie the young girl, he was not satisfied with the manner in which she was doing it and he then hit the girl (Miss Griffin) on the head with the revolver and knocked her unconscious."

Mrs. Carpenter, according to the confession, began to fight back. She fell to the floor, and before she could arise, Bowers, the confession declared, had drilled two bullets into her.

His next move was to attempt to assault Miss Griffin, the F. B. I. stated. He finished binding her, then calmly went into the bathroom, took a bath and made a second search of the women's pocketbooks, finding only a quarter.

Given Ride to Station.

He said he left the house and that a chauffeur, driving a large automobile, gave him a ride to the station where, first making certain no one was observing him, he threw the pistol into a sewer alongside the roadway.

He walked down the railroad tracks to the next station, where he took a train to Philadelphia. From there his itinerary included Pittsburgh, Erie, Fredonia, N. Y., a small town 18 miles the other side of Buffalo, where he spent the night in a police station and gave the name of George Francis Lewis, 103 Charing street, San Diego, Calif.

Later, the F. B. I. stated, he went to Chicago, Cincinnati, and thence to Louisville, where he was arrested December 20, the same day he arrived.

The 19-year-old youth, with the protruding, glassy eyes, had been sought all over the East since the murder.

Fingerprints brought about his identification.

Bowers was reported in Washington within a week after the killing and attack in Philadelphia. He also was reported seen by several persons on December 20, the day, according to Hoover's announcement, he was arrested in Louisville.

Letters From Spies in Hague's Own City Hall Inform C. I. O., Pledge Aid to Thwart Mayor

Traffic, Fire Problems Critical for City of Like Size.

Ernst has planned at least three months of legal maneuvers with which to harass Mayor Hague. Both sides have declared the battle will be a finish fight—Hague "until the Reds are driven out," and Ernst "until the C. I. O. can meet and organize peaceably in Jersey City."

Both sides, it appears, are guilty of exaggeration. The Communist Party claims the magnificent total of 75 members in Hudson County and only the most rabid American Legion members assert the C. I. O. is communistic.

On the other hand, the C. I. O. seems to be doing all right, with three headquarters and 3,000 members in Jersey City and peaceable organization continuing in the various industrial plants all the time. It claims more than 10,000 members in the entire county. Its basic complaint is that it cannot hire, at any price and under any guarantees, a suitably large hall or open-air space for a mass-meeting to be addressed by its top-flight leaders.

Violence Possible.

Such a meeting would be dynamite after patriotic passions of the legionnaires were so carefully fanned at the meeting called by the mayor's office last week. Unquestionably violence would ensue unless the mayor adopted the strategy he has sometimes used—that of allowing protests against a meeting ban to pile up for some time; to allow the meeting suddenly, and order no violence; then to confront the protesters with the bland assertion: "What are you complaining about? You had your meeting."

That happened many times back in 1928 and 1929 when citizens' indignation meetings over high tax rates were being held.

Some misunderstanding has arisen over the significance attached to that "Message From the Mayor's Office" ordering all veterans to report to the Armory for a meeting. Those who do not understand Jersey City conditions imagine such a message did not guarantee unanimous attendance but that the 3,000 veterans went from patriotic motives alone.

Mayor's Word Law.

It thus may be well to explain that Mayor Hague believes in direct methods. In 1932 he became disturbed over the increasing toll from traffic accidents. He did not mince words or lecture the population generally. He merely sent out a notice that all persons who drove automobiles in the city must attend a course of lectures for instruction in driving.

The lectures included action pictures, lantern slides, diagrams and so forth. The citizens went in flocks and were marked on attendance. Second and third notices were sent out. Autoists' driving permits were marked with notations on attendance.

Now observe the follow-through. Thereafter whenever any autoist was arrested for a traffic violation of any sort, the court's first duty was to look at his card. If it showed the driver had faithfully attended the traffic school sessions, he was given the lightest sentence permissible. If he had not attended, he was given the most severe punishment up to the maximum allowed.

Traffic Just "Waits."

Messages from the mayor's office, therefore, are not lightly regarded in Jersey City.

But the citizens, through the years, have acquired a profound cynicism. "Oh yeah?" has been shortened to "Yeah?" For the Hague regime carries its penalties as well as its benefits.

Over and above the tax rates, which can be demonstrated to be the highest per capita in the country, there are such daily irritations as the traffic situation, the (to say the least) undependable fire department, and similar matters.

Because of the necessity of keeping at work the hundreds of policemen who crowd the pay rolls, traffic lights have been dispensed with at the central intersections of the city. A driver new to Jersey City can only give up hopelessly any attempt to find his way through the maze of directing policemen. The more experienced avoid the central section at all costs, or merely sit and wait for lengthy periods at these intersections.

Fire Alarms Ignored.

Streets are almost indescribably littered throughout the city, despite the famous Hague ordinance prohibiting distribution of leaflets and circulars on an antilitter program.

But the fire department deserves especial attention. Two persons, the head maid and a bell boy, died in a fire that gutted the Plaza Hotel holiday week, while the telephone operator was severely burned. The fire department located only a few blocks away did not answer frantic alarms for a full half-hour, according to the Jersey Journal, on the grounds that the scores of desperate telephone calls did not constitute an "alarm," which the chief defined as one in which a fire-box is used.

When it did arrive, the only nearby fire plug—remember this happened a 50-foot half-block away from Journal Square, heart of the business section—was on a curve up a narrow street, Enos place, alongside the hotel, both sides of which were completely blocked with parked automobiles.

Paper Mildly Critical.

Resourceful citizens pushed and hauled the cars, in great confusion, as much out of the way as possible, while the head maid, sitting in panic on a sixth-floor window ledge all this time, at last was overcome by smoke and toppled back inside the room to die of suffocation.

Even the Jersey Journal, friendly to Hague, made mild editorial and news stabs at the inefficiency of the department in this instance and recommended that the department at least change its ruling about "still" alarms, telephone calls, to the point of investigating them, especially when they occur in the very center of town.

The newspaper further pointed out it had complained many times of angle-parking and of both-sides parking in the very narrow Enos place for that very reason—fire danger.

C. I. O. Fight "a Blind."

But if there is one thing that stands out above all others to the casual visitor in Jersey City, it is that parking regulations are almost never enforced, despite the extraordinary number of policemen. Parking over cross-walks, in front of fire-plugs, before entrances and only distantly paralell to the curbs, for hours at a time in business streets—everything goes. I asked many citizens about this and the invariable reaction was cynical surprise. A large number said:

"You'll never get tagged as long as you're o. k."

Yet C. I. O. organizers in Jersey City have paid repeated fines for parking on streets near their headquarters. Sam Macri, C. I. O. organizer, who with William Carney directs the fight from Newark, insists that in each case for which he was fined his car was parked parallel to the curb exactly as every other car was parked but that his car alone was tagged.

But these are minor variations on the main theme of Jersey City in the present situation. Major investigation has never been done on the city's finances, the election conditions under which the Hague machine sweeps inevitably to victory in each campaign, the property and tax rates in relation to those of comparable cities and those "private affairs" of the mayor which he has for 20 years insisted are beyond the scope of any investigation.

From a hasty survey, however, it is safe to conclude the present C. I. O. battle with Jersey City is largely window-dressing on both sides. The C. I. O. is fighting for sympathy in its campaign to organize and the mayor is focusing the city's attention on matters other than Hagueism.

Pastor's Sermon To Three Bandits Saves Gift Bible

A modern "Sermon on the Mount" last night saved the Rev. Ralph Byron McMankin, pastor of the Assembly of God Church, Avon, N. C., his Bible.

Mr. McMankin had come here by automobile to visit his daughter, Mrs. Louise Walker, of 4401 Kensington avenue southeast. Somewhere in D street, as he was trying to find his way, two colored bandits leaped on the running board of his car. They snatched his bag, wallet with $10 and his watch. Then they grabbed the Bible, a gift from his congregation.

"That is a sin," said Mr. McMankin. "Leave my Bible with me."

The Utility Decisions.

Varying interpretations are being placed upon the decisions handed down by the Supreme Court on Monday. In some cases they are regarded as a victory for the New Deal and a triumph for the President's theories of rate-making. But the vigorous dissent of Justice Black in the Indianapolis Water Co. case indicates that this view is a long way from being unanimous.

In the opinion denying any right on the part of power companies to stop the PWA from subsidizing municipal power plants the Administration has undoubtedly won a victory. But it may be a rather hollow triumph. Just now the President is attempting to reach an understanding with the private power companies that would permit a large-scale construction program in this field to go ahead. To proceed with a policy of making gifts to cities for the development of competitive power plants may seriously retard the President's efforts to stimulate expansion of private power facilities.

The chief significance of the rate cases seems to be a determination on the part of the court to veer away from any definite formula for the fixing of utility rates. Whether or not entirely warranted from past decisions, an impression had developed that the court regarded the "reproduction cost" theory as the proper formula for the valuation of utility properties. But in the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. case the court indicates that utility commissions are free to apply the "prudent investment" theory of valuation.

As Chief Justice Hughes pointed out, the court has never decided "that the cost of reproduction furnishes an exclusive test" of a utility company's valuation for rate-making purposes. It has only insisted that the cost of reproducing property "is a relevant fact which should have appropriate consideration." The important issue is not the valuation formula used, but whether or not the rates fixed are confiscatory and therefore in violation of constitutional guarantees.

It is equally clear that the court does not intend to rely upon historical costs as the sole test of property value in rate cases. The Indianapolis Water Co. case was sent back to the lower court for rehearing because that court had based its decision on valuation data nearly three years old, despite sharp changes in commodity prices.

A long dissertation by Justice Black interprets this action as an indorsement of the "reproduction cost" theory of valuation. But he appears to have missed the significant point. The lower court was not instructed to retry the case according to any valuation formula, but only to take judicial notice of actual present conditions instead of assumptions based on findings in 1933.

Critics will again complain that the court has left utility ratemaking in a cloud of confusion. But it is not the function of the court to determine what formula should be applied by regulatory bodies. Its duty is purely protective. Cases of this kind are taken before the court only as a safeguard against the confiscation of property without due process of law. Apparently the majority justices are willing to recognize any reasonable valuation formula that does not clearly deprive utility concerns of their constitutional rights.

Certainly, from the judicial viewpoint, that is a reasonable attitude.

Kitchen To Laboratory.

That most of tomorrow's wonders are lying unnoticed under our noses is one of civilization's commonplaces. Even the most ardent and earnest of researchers is often the beneficiary of chance. One is interested rather than astonished, therefore, to learn that it was a housewife rather than a scientist who gave Robert Koch opportunity to make his bacteriological discoveries of lasting benefit. And she was merely a link in a long chain.

Perhaps it was in Ceylon, centuries ago, that a native first discovered how a certain seaweed (Ceylon moss or agar-agar) would dissolve in hot water and "jell" when cool. Anyway, for generations past cooks in the East have used it for soups and jellies.

Somewhere about the middle of the last century (dates are uncertain) a Dutch family left Java and settled in Jersey City, in due course imparting to a German neighbor the important culinary fact. The daughter of the neighbor, Fannie Elishemius, visited Saxony, met and married Dr. Walther Hesse, and stayed there. Dr. Hesse, studying the bacterial content of the air, had, with Dr. Koch, found gelatin an unsatisfactory solidifying agent for culture media. Frau Hesse suggested they try agar. They did, and just how many lives Frau Hesse saved thereby is beyond computing.

That was more than 50 years ago. Just the other day two eminent bacteriologists paid tribute to Frau Hesse at a meeting of the Society of American Bacteriologists. But nobody has as yet dug up the name of the old Dutch woman who brought the message from Java.

Anti-Trust Law Problems.

The report of Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, head of the antitrust division of the Department of Justice, contains a severe and justified indictment of the ineffectiveness and virtual unenforceability of the existing body of antitrust legislation.

"In terms of the law and the decisions interpreting it," Mr. Jackson says, "plausible briefs may be written to support any combination, however undesirable, or to attack business activities which actually are designed solely for the elimination of waste." That is undoubtedly true and that is why business men have for years been urging clarifying revisions of the antitrust laws and authoritative interpretations of their obscure and often conflicting provisions.

Although Mr. Jackson cannily avoids offering positive recommendations for changes in existing laws, he makes some very significant statements which afford a clew to the type of legislation he considers desirable. In his opinion, the courts are at fault for failing or refusing to "determine the validity of price policies in terms of the only possible standard which can be practically enforced, i. e., results." This judicial preoccupation with the motives or intentions of fictitious corporate individuals, he maintains, has converted the antitrust laws into "theological tracts on corporate morality." By ignoring practical results and upholding current business practices followed by respectable business men, the courts have, according to Mr. Jackson's way of thinking, made the antitrust laws impotent to prevent rigid price structures and excessive concentration of business.

No doubt lawyers could cite a good many antitrust law decisions in which the courts have looked at results rather than motives. Nevertheless, it is unquestionably true that in many cases the search for "sinister intent" rather than an inquiry into the effect of combinations on prices has been the chief consideration. Instead of attacking the courts for that trend of interpretation, Mr. Jackson should look to the law itself for an explanation of the concern over motives.

Criminal prosecutions under the antitrust laws certainly could not be pushed without regard for the moral culpability of alleged offenders. The interests of justice would not be served by fining or jailing men for acts undertaken in good faith without any intention of breaking the law. Yet if their conduct were to be judged solely by practical results, the innocent would suffer along with the consciously guilty.

If Mr. Jackson's advice should be followed, drastic revisions of the present body of antitrust legislation would be required. If results alone are to be a test of the validity of price policies, it becomes most important to decide whose judgment is to prevail. Could or should Congress try to devise a formula for guidance of the courts? Or should governmental agencies decide when a given price policy is good or bad? Mr. Jackson is silent about such matters, but he has made it clear that he strongly disapproves of accepting uncritically practices indorsed by long use and general consent of businessmen.

There are numerous other questions raised by Mr. Jackson's charge that in large sections of American industry competition has disappeared. Admitting the fact, are we to assume that the Assistant Attorney General would welcome a return to conditions of free competition in which prices fluctuate up and down without restraint? Should we infer that Mr. Jackson considers the results evil when a few large business units become sole producers of certain goods which could not be produced as well, if at all, by small units? These issues are of fundamental importance to the American people.

Consumers are entitled to protection against exploitation. But that can be provided even when industrial units are large and competition subject to regulation. The trend toward controlled competition, and large-unit production has been a natural economic development that has proved to be stronger than the laws intended to prevent it. Many students of economic trends believe that the impotence of the antitrust laws to maintain free competition over a wide area is due to an evolutionary force much more powerful than the disposition of judges to probe into the motives of those charged with breaking the laws.

Behind The News.

In a postscript to a story on the journalistic aspects of the war in China, H. R. Ekins, of the United Press, observes in the current issue of Editor and Publisher: "I have had to renege on the matter of personal exploits. Our job is to write about other people, isn't it?"

At a time when lecture halls and the ether waves are overrun with self-dramatized personalities, this is refreshing modesty. It can not, however, entirely distract attention from the hazards which reporters face when they are called in to describe the events from which other civilians are fleeing.

Mr. Ekins, for example, notes casually in his article that "I was in the Palace Hotel in which 247 persons were killed by the first bomb to fall." Scores of other reporters in war zones doubtless have had similar narrow escapes on numerous occasions. But until a Panay is bombed, and the implications more than justify eyewitness accounts of the incident, readers at home miss the daring and hardship which lie behind the morning's war news. Too frequently it is only the report of a correspondent's death that makes vivid the dangers he has experienced.

The latest of these tells of the passing of Edward J. Neil and Bradish Johnson, along with an English colleague. Their deaths raise to more than 40 the toll of newspaper reporters and photographers killed in line of duty during the Ethiopian, Spanish and Sino-Japanese hostilities. The lives of many more will be materially shortened by hardships undergone and diseases contracted.

Newspapering is a highly strenuous business, at best; at worst, it can be highly dangerous. Contrary to a common belief, its rewards are not high, even in terms of romance. The fact that so many nonetheless cheerfully dedicate their lives to a thankless undertaking should be balanced against deficiencies, some of them inherent in the nature of the task.

Rescue The Housing Bill.

In the closing hours of its extra session the Senate placed a heavy burden on the conference committee which is now working on the Administration's housing bill. Apparently without realizing the effects of their action, vacation-minded Senators approved an amendment that would effectively sabotage the entire bill.

It was Senator Lodge who offered the damaging amendment. Apparently he was playing politics. Of course, he realized that the Senate is likely to favor the policy of maintaining prevailing wage rates on general principle. And he must have known that to make the guaranty of mortgages under the new housing bill subject to the payment of prevailing wages in the construction of homes thus financed would wreck the bill. Whichever way majority Senators voted they would be embarrassed.

A great deal might be said about the use of such important legislation as a basis for political pranks. But the distressing aspect of the incident is the naive way in which the Senate walked into the trap. In its haste to get away for the holidays Senators who had talked much about recovery measures made hash of the most significant bill in this category that the Administration has to offer.

Of course, the blunder will have to be corrected in conference. One of the foremost objectives of the housing bill is to aid workingmen in this field. But to do that hourly wage rates must be reduced in favor of better yearly incomes for carpenters, plumbers and similar groups. President Roosevelt has repeatedly stressed the fact that success of his program is dependent upon reduction of high hourly wages and high prices of supplies.

That, however, is not the major objection to the Lodge amendment. It would be obviously impossible for the FHA to compel every citizen obtaining a guaranteed mortgage to pay a given wage scale to the workmen building his house. Consequently the result of the amendment would be to cripple, not only the new housing program, but also the building now being carried on by private enterprise, with the aid of this new mortgage system. Of course, that result would be seriously detrimental to labor.

The conference committee should make the complete elimination of this indefensible amendment its first order of business.

Maybe we haven't the proper consideration and respect for the solemn and serious-minded person who carries the world around on his shoulders, but we are always reminded that, on a smaller scale, the tumblebug does somewhat the same thing.

The groom who gave his bride a cookbook for a Christmas present is doing as well as can be expected, and attending physicians say if further complications do not arise he may be able to leave the hospital about the middle of May.

"A marked rise is noted in the birth rate of the American Indian." Sometimes it looks as if this country will yet be overrun by foreigners.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The trouble with the controversies of this old world is that you never get them settled. Take the rumpus a few years ago over how to pronounce the name of the first great diarist. There were those who held one way and those who held another, and then the Encyclopedia Britannica came along and said flatly: "The name was pronounced in the seventeenth century and has always been pronounced by the family, 'Peeps.'"

Did that settle it? Well, not for long. Here is none other than the Earl of Cottenham, born Mark Pepys, and the present head of the family which gave the world the immortal Samuel, declaring that the name is not only correctly said as if it were "Peppis," but that it actually has been so spelled upon occasion.

In his book, "Mine Host America," which reports on the Earl's visit to the United States, the present head of the clan lists no fewer than 18 spellings in use at one time or another. Besides Papys and Peppis, they are: Pepe, Peppe, Pepyons, Pepis, Pypes, Peppes, Pepes, Peaps, Pippis, Peapys, Peps, Pypes, Peeps, Peepes, Peyps and Pepyes. So reporting, we wash our hands of the whole business. The next thing you know, they'll be spelling it Popeyes and claiming the vivid man of letters of the comic page as a long-lost kinsman.

'Constitution Is Okay.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Ah, at last we have a solution to all our problems! I refer to the plan as advanced by Mr. Lanier in The Post of January 3.

His plan, as set out roughly in his letter, is to eliminate the House of Representatives, reduce a Senator's term to once only, and to have the President serve for six years. Then he will revamp the Constitution to conform to this program.

What would such a plan amount to? It would amount to the proverbial row of pins! We would be saddled with a President for six years instead of four. We would have to get rid of our Senators, or Council members, as he calls them, after one term, that is, after they learn the ropes, and we could have the pleasure of breaking in new members. As for revamping the Constitution, well, we all know the answer to that.

No, what we need most is the right application of what we already possess. The Constitution is okay as she stands. Our Presidents, as they have run of late, should be in less time instead of more, and we should try to hold all the good Senators that we have as long as we can. RAYMOND NEWMAN.

Washington, Jan. 3.

From NewDealer To Economic Royalist

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have always voted the Democratic ticket. For the last few years I have considered myself a good New Dealer. Now I'm beginning to wonder if I haven't been in the wrong pew. Perhaps I'm an economic royalist and didn't know it.

After reading the speeches of those Administration stalwarts, Mr. Jackson and Mr. Ickes, I find myself looking not with malevolence but with sympathy at the group Mr. Ickes wants "purged." Perhaps I've been sympathizing so strongly with the victims of the "purges" in Russia and Germany that it has become a habit. I'm wondering if possibly Mr. Ickes wouldn't decide to include me and a good many thousand others who undoubtedly think as I do in his purge.

It would be hard to stop with the liquidation of the "60 families." Mr. Iskes and Mr. Stalin might make a game of it—see which one could "purge" the greatest number of political opponents in a month. There should be a nice prize for the winner—a loving cup, perhaps, or a copy of the Constitution of the United States. Or should it be something more practical? A gold-plated guillotine, for instance? We're open to suggestions from either of the contestants or from the international audience.

Having been forced by Mr. Jackson and Mr. Ickes into the group of economic royalists which is to be mastered, I'm a little uncertain how I should comport myself. My income was a little under $3,000 last year. I have no capital, but I have a lot of debts left over from the previous depression. I have also a wife and two children and, just now, a new crop of doctors' and hospital bills as a result of a recent major operation. You can easily see how difficult it is for me to know how to play my new role. An economic royalist—with a wolf on the front porch!

It is with the greatest reluctance that I have come to the conclusion that Mr. Jackson and Mr. Ickes are playing Charlie McCarthy to Mr. Roosevelt's Eddie Bergen. It is tragic for those of us who have believed, in spite of everything, in the shining objectives of Mr. Roosevelt and his New Deal, to face the inescapable fact that the President is now "playing politics with human misery." For not even the most loyal New Dealer can believe that the bitter diatribe of Mr. Jackson or the rabble-rousing incoherence of Mr. Ickes will increase the number of jobs available to the millions of unemployed in America.

I find myself wondering if Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Mellon, for instance, may not have done more to provide employment and the more abundant life for "America's 120,000,000 people" than either Mr. Jackson or Mr. Ickes. That is, no doubt, a highly treasonable thought and one for which I should be "disinfected."

Admitting that Mr. Jackson's speeches were sophomoric and that Mr. Ickes was his usual sincere but adolescent self and that all three speeches were obvious, face-saving gestures, nevertheless they have widened the breach between the Administration and industry and will increase fear and decrease employment. Regardless of what Mr. Roosevelt said in his speech to Congress on January 3, he has already, through Mr. Jackson and Mr. Ickes, given to millions of Americans a New Year's gift of unemployment, suffering and hardship.

DISILLUSIONED.

Washington, Jan. 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent additions to the anthology of alibis for the "Roosevelt depression," all of which carry a familiar odor, are precious gems.

Such spleenish drivel, harmonizing perfectly as it does with the New Deal tantrums of recent months, is, of course, an insult to the intelligence of the American people. But whether Messrs. Jackson and Ickes are so far the victims of their own shallowness as to believe what they say, whether they have been betrayed by the sophomoric handiwork of their ghosts and stooges, or whether they think they can deceive the people with such twaddle is of secondary importance. The portentous fact is that these men, like others who have resorted to similar shyster tactics, are public servants holding positions of such responsibility as ought to inspire scrupulous regard for fair, temperate and unimpeachable utterance.

Abroad, their crass exhibitionism will, of course, make us the laughing stock of the world. Here at home, it will serve to undermine confidence in orderly democratic government. It is a significant fact that, despite the play upon Fascism calculated to create a "psychology of fear," one finds in these official diatribes not a single thread which would fit into any consistent pattern of democracy. Unfortunately a few citizens who are ill-fortified against such bovine outbursts will be tricked.

Worse perhaps than the absence of any note of statesmanship or even the flair of good politics is the sour self-righteousness which seems to have gripped both Mr. Jackson and Mr. Ickes. It is doubly reprehensible that these men, who are themselves nothing more than the accidents of partisan politics, should direct their inept criticism toward those to whom the world is everlastingly in debt for constructive achievement.

In the light of what is actually happening, this bull-dozing verbiage of the New Deal mouthpieces is an unparalleled exhibition of gall. By exploiting the distress of a few millions of unfortunate persons scattered throughout the land, the most brutal political machine ever devised has been built up. Already that machine has repudiated democracy to the point where it is but a short step to the Fascism which Mr. Ickes so unctuously condemns.

How much longer must the helpless air be burdened with the supercilious vacuity of this oligarchy—less than 60 in number—who are ambitious, not to govern the United States within the framework of the Consitution and through the democratic process, but to rule it by their own demagogic caprice? Has the time not come for the American people to put on rubber gloves and prepare to clean house?

Analyzing Democracy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The tradition of democracy rests upon four fundamental principles, respectively, the sovereignty of the people, the equality of all men, majority rule and the consent of the governed.

The sovereignty of the people means that they are supreme in power and not subject to another. An examination of the nature of man reveals the fact that the cause of his existence is outside of himself. Insofar as he does not create himself he is subject to another and is not sovereign. The individual human being is limited and subject to many natural laws and forces which are beyond his control. Sovereignty is an exclusive attribute of the Supreme Being and no one else can properly claim it.

The doctrine that all men are born free and equal is the next constitutive element of democracy. As a matter of fact, every person is born as a baby in a state of absolute dependence unable to provide for himself. He is born ignorant and needs to be guided and instructed by others and therefore cannot be called free. Men differ in height, health, natural disposition, wealth, condition, race, religion and in many other respects and therefore cannot be truthfully called equal.

Majority rule is based upon the idea of the equality of all men. If men are equal it is reasonable to suppose that the will of a majority of them should decide any question. We have seen that all men are not equal; however, some men are equal in certain degrees and respects. Among such, majority rule can be used. Again, an inferior minority can always be ruled by a superior majority. On the contrary, an inferior majority can never rule a superior minority, otherwise the minority is not really superior.

The consent of the governed is subjectively and objectively true as a principle. No matter how high or low human beings may be in the scale of existence they have a moral right to consent to the form of government they want. The human will because it is a free and variable factor can become the source of much misery. The flucuation of the collective will of the Europeans has caused much instability in their governments since 1789.

The same abuse tends to express itself here in the doctrine of rotation in office. Our forebears deemed it wise to be able to remove any person from public office whenever he became corrupt or tyrannical. They did not intend, however, that a good and efficient public official should be limited to one or two terms and then forever after made ineligible to hold office. This constant change of public officials without regard to their efficiency creates great instability in our Government.

My logical analysis of democracy shows that it is made up of three-fourths falsehood and one-fourth truth. IVO DE CAPET.

For Suffrage Organization.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From my contact with the people here during my lifelong residence in this city, I have found great division of opinion on such questions as methods of taxation, payment of tuition fees for children of nearby Maryland and Virginia who attend our public schools, etc. But on the question of suffrage, there exists a unanimity of opinion, which, if given voice through the apparatus of one large central organization, would make itself heard in tones too loud to be ignored—as are the chirpings of our existing small disintegrated groups.

I look forward to some one group taking the initiative and inviting all other groups and interested individuals to a sort of joint conference that will lead to a complete unification of energies to bring suffrage to the people of Washington.

The Blind Man.

I SAT down beside him without looking at him. You know how it is on the bus. You're conscious of people around you, of course, but hardly as individuals. The chances are you've never seen them before. So you sit down and relax. I heard him speak.

"Do you have enough room?" he asked.

"Yes, thank you," I said. Then I glanced at him.

He was a large man with a genial face. In one hand he carried a package that bore the label of a department store; his other hand rested on the handle of a cane. He wore glasses. Suddenly I realized he was blind.

"Well," he said, "here we are with another year ahead of us."

"Yes." I saw he wanted to talk. I realized he had not said another year behind us.

"It always amuses me a little," he went on, "to note how seriously people take turning over the calendar. In a moment of exuberance they promise themselves all sorts of things — accomplishments, changes in character, almost anything, simply because the computation of time changes. I find that rather sad."

"Why, if I may ask?"

"Of course you may ask. The reason I find it sad is because most of those people won't live up to their own word. To begin with, they have to have an excuse for promising things even to themselves. That in itself is a little pathetic. They could do the same things for themselves if they only would. The trouble is that they don't really want what they think they want enough to give up something that they realize isn't important for something that they realize is. Of course, they do take the first step, but too often that is all. If they only knew it, it would be really very easy for them to go on.

"I meet people all the time who pity me because I am blind. They can't seem to understand that there is no reason why I should be pitied. At first I used to resent their solicitation, but then I realized that there was only kindness behind it and I found that being appreciative of their interest won me friends. I like people too much to want to turn them away. I may be blind, but I'm still alive. And why should I let an ocular inconvenience interfere with my life?"

He chuckled quietly to himself.

"Should I let myself be put into a wheel chair and pushed about like an invalid? That would be absurd. I've had people say to me, 'The trouble with you is that you don't know when you're licked!' That may be true, but after all a man is licked only in his mind. Limitations don't exist if they aren't acknowledged, and they're acknowledged in the mind."

"May I ask what your business is?"

He laughed again. "I'm what is known as a traveling salesman. During the year just passed I was in 20 States. Last summer I was in San Francisco for the first time and spent two hours at the busiest time of day shopping downtown. It wasn't hard. I was also in Chicago for only four hours last summer and spent one of them in Marshall Field's. I've had people ask me if I'm not afraid to go around like that. There's nothing to be afraid of. I try to be sensible and careful, and you've no idea how kind people are until you need them."

"Do you do most of your traveling by train?"

"Yes. I find out when the trains are leaving and I get on them before they go. That's about all there is to it. I haven't tried the planes yet, though I may some day. After all, other people ride them."

"Do you like Washington?" I asked. "Do you find it easy to get around here?"

"Yes. I like it and I find it easy to get around. Why not? The curbings are the same, the streets have corners to them and buildings on them. I know where I want to go before I start out. I came here a stranger and set out to learn the plan of the city. It's one of the easiest to learn. When I'm in town I ride the buses back and forth every day. I know the route that the bus I want takes, and I ask someone to tell me when it comes. Someone always does."

"How long have you been blind?"

"Nineteen years. And I have to chuckle to myself when I look back and realize what I've learned in those years. Many people, I've found, err in believing that all knowledge comes through the eyes. The Lord gave us other senses, too, you know. And if we use them in more than a perfunctory way it's astonishing what we can learn. For instance, I find that Washington has a very pleasant atmosphere. I don't believe this because of anything I've ever seen here. I don't think it because the people in Washington might have physical characteristics any better or any worse than the people anywhere else in America. I think it because I hear them speak and I listen to the tones of their voices. I smell freshly mown grass in the summer and burning leaves in the fall. I also smell gasoline fumes and at times other things even less pleasant. But one expects that. No one place has everything, no one person has everything, and I've found that in the long run things are pretty well evened out. Don't you agree?"

"Yes," I answered, and rose. "I'm getting off at the next stop. Good luck to you. Good luck in 1938."

"Good luck to you," he said cheerfully. Then he added, "I hope I'll see you again."

PENDLETON HOGAN.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

In Hague's Bailiwick

DANIEL CASEY, the commissioner of public safety or boss cop of Frank Hague's dictatorship in Jersey City, has forbidden a C. I. O. meeting on the ground that the Chamber of Commerce, the A. F. of L. unions and an unnamed organization of war veterans wouldn't like it and that the veterans would riot and break it up.

PEGLER.

In his refusal of a permit, Mr. Casey reports that the veterans recently held a mass meeting in which they threatened to commit violent disorder if the C. I. O. exercises the same right of assembly and speech. He does not explain, however, why he, in his fearless zeal for public order, failed to break up that meeting as an obvious menace to the peace of Jersey City and neglected to arrest those war veterans who threatened violent disorder.

Unfortunately, Mr. Casey can find precedent for his outlaw attitude in the conduct of the C. I. O. itself in the Little Steel strike last June. In that crisis it was announced that 40,000 C. I. O. coal miners were preparing to march into Johnstown, Pa., to prevent regular workers—not strikebreakers—from going to work at their jobs in the Bethlehem plant.

The C. I. O. miners' position then was the same as that of the Jersey City war veterans now. And Gov. Earle's conduct was the same as Commissioner Casey's.

• • • •

GOV. EARLE said there might be a terrible massacre if the plant were opened. Therefore he called out the troops, not to protect the workers, the plant and the peace from riot by the 40,000 miners but to close the works. It wasn't the workers who threatened to riot in Johnstown, and it is not the C. I. O. which now threatens to riot in Jersey City. In each case the Government took the side of the offender.

The Johnstown affair was sure to mock the C. I. O. in future struggles, and the deadly parallel occurs within six months when a group of veterans have the effrontery to use, in the name of Americanism, the very method which they perceive to be un-American when it is practiced by the C. I. O.

However, the Johnstown matter is now water over the dam. The C. I. O. is inconsistent and comes into court with dirty hands, but the character of the plaintiff cannot be accepted as justification for the denial of rights which the Jersey veterans themselves abused in their own meeting.

Mr. Casey's duty is to issue the permit for the C. I. O. meeting, surround the place with the same tough cops who flog the ears off labor organizers when they appear in Jersey City, and arrest any man, veteran or not, who makes a move toward the fulfillment of the threat.

Mr. Casey does not particularly identify this body of veterans, but the American Legion would seem to repudiate the threat or admit that its solemn resolution against Fascism as well as Communism, adopted three years ago and reaffirmed last summer between frequent though unofficial episodes of obscene assault on unescorted woman on the New York streets, was meaningless.

War veterans have no more right to riot than any other class of people, and any police commissioner who admits that he is unable to cope with a gang who simplifies his task by announcing their riotous purpose and publicly identifying themselves thereby admits that he isn't fit for his job.

• • • •

THE FACT IS, of course, that the veterans are merely stooges who have been induced to do a dirty job for a local dictator. Otherwise, every man at their meeting who said anything about organizing a riot would have been beaten half to death by Frank Hague's cops and would now be doing a piece in prison.

Nobody can organize a riot in Frank Hague's town without Frank Hague's permission and blessing.

And, as for the "business interests" and the A. F. of L. unions which disapprove the C. I. O. meeting, just who the hell do they think they are and since when has it been necessary for anyone to obtain their permission to exercise the same Constitutional rights that they invoked in adopting their anti-Constitutional resolutions?

As this comparison shows, both extremes in the fight are quick to flout the rights of others and enlist the help of ill-balanced politicians to gain their ends in a crisis.

The radicals on the labor side are no more fastidious about the rights of people who get in their way than the Jersey City veterans are about the rights of the C. I. O. in the present case. And the man in the middle, the one who stops most of their bricks and who believes in compelling each side to respect the rights of the other, is the one to whom they always address their appeals for support and redress.

War Under the Ludlow Resolution.

(The Ludlow resolution now before Congress provides that, except in a case of invasion, the authority of Congress to declare war shall not became effective until confirmed by a nation-wide referendum.)

• • • •

SHANGHAI.—Four United States gunboats were sunk in the Whangpoo river today by an enemy fleet. Only about 30 sailors and officers survived.

"This is outrageous," declared a surviving naval officer, "We demand a referendum!"

• • • •

MANILA.—Two American destroyers and a cruiser were shelled by an enemy squadron in Philippine waters during the night. Admiral T. Jarvis Poosey, commanding the American unit here, when asked if his ships had returned the fire, replied:

"No. I've got to wait for the people back home to vote on it."

• • • •

HONGKONG.—Japanese airmen dropped bombs on two United States liners, sank three more naval vessels and trampled on the American flag today. A Japanese general is reported to have issued orders to shoot Americans on sight.

Representatives of the American government here expressed the opinion that this was carrying things pretty far. "A few more cases like this and the people of the United States may be forced to go to the polls and pull down the 'Yes' lever," declared an indignant envoy.

• • • •

GIBRALTAR.—An Italian fleet staged a submarine attack on an American squadron off here today, sinking two battleships without warning or provocation. It then ordered the rest of the Amercian vessels out of the Mediterranean. Rear Admiral Herman Skitterish fled with the rest of the American ships at once, saying:

"There is nothing we can do but await a national referendum and trust to a fair count."

Troops To Libya

Analysis Of Geopolitics Of Duce's North African Possession Gives Grim Forebodings To Inflow Of Troops.

By S. Miles Bouton.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

NEWS COMES that Mussolini is sending more troops to Libya, and it is believed that the intention is eventually to raise the total to 120,000 men. In addition to this will be members of the Fascist militia settled in the colony who are subject to a call to the colors at any time.

Speculations concerning the ultimate purpose of establishing a strong force in Libya suggest two explanations. One is that Il Duce, fearing war, desires to have a striking force on the southern shore of the Mediterranean. The other suggestion deals with the fact that Italy, even before Mussolini appeared on the scene, had long been casting envious eyes not only toward the eastern shore of the Adriatic, but also toward Tunisia, the French protectorate bordering on Libya.

It can be asserted with a good deal of confidence that the dream of aggrandizing Italy with Balkan territory has had to be abandoned. One still reads occasionally that either Yugoslavia or Rumania has been won away from the Little Entente and over to the side of Germany and Italy; at times even that both have abandoned Czechoslovakia and France. Yugoslavia's treaty of some months ago with Italy and the fact that there exists in Rumania a strong anti-Semitic and Fascist element furnish the basis for commentators who doubt the solidity of the Little Entente.

Cordiality Shown Delbos Said To Indicate Little.

THAT THE RECEPTION accorded the French foreign minister, Yvon Delbos, on his recent visit to Bucharest, Belgrade and Prague was everywhere hearty and apparently genuine is in itself, of course, of little significance. A Japanese statesman visiting Washington would be heartily received, although probably 99 per cent of all Americans view his government with feelings of repulsion. But the results already reported of Delbos' visit are tangible and encouraging to all opponents of aggressive nations.

Outstanding among those results is the agreement by which France will co-operate with the air forces of Poland and Rumania. Poland has long been aiding in the development of Rumania's air force, and France will now lend her help, both technical and financial. Rumanian pilots receive their training on Polish aviation fields, but both countries lack money and new equipment for building up an air force of the strength required to meet the menace from the west.

Octavian Goga, Rumania's new premier, is one of the leaders of the anti-Semitic National Christian Party, which is strongly pro-German, but his ticket received less than 10 per cent of the total vote in the last election, and no other party would support him in forming a cabinet. His declaration that he will apply the Fascist principles of his party is thus of little importance, for even if Tatarescu's Liberals support him, which is hardly likely, he will have the support of only a small fraction of the Parliament. In other words, he cannot swing Rumania out of the French orbit.

Delbos received from Yugoslavia the assurance that no agreement or understanding with Italy had been reached which could interfere with that country's obligations to the Little Entente, and, through it, to France. The strange inability of Polish and Czech statesmen to adjust the differences between their two countries does not alter the certainty that these countries will, as they must, stand together against an attack from the west.

Excluded thus from the Balkans, Italy must look elsewhere for the next step toward "Roman universality," the re-creating of the empire of the Caesars. Where will she begin?

Recent German Writings Suggest Strategy Of Move.

THE WHOLE SITUATION makes it in highest degree probable that one can find the answer in recent books and articles published in Germany, Italy's ally. In "Geopolitical Essays," published by Gen. Haushofer, one reads:

"Although Libya has only a very small economic value, it offers by reason of its situation opportunities for expansion on three sides. Italy had again set foot (by the Treaty of Ouchy in 1912) on African territory in the Mediterranean region, and thus resumed an old Roman tradition. Besides the hope of developing Libya further, the real value of this colonial possession is found not in the economic field, but in the possibilities of manifold expansion.

"The great caravan routes, which on one side reach out from Tripolis through the Sahara to Timbuctoo, on the other side southward to Lake Tchad, indicate at the same time directions of expansion. Lake Tchad was precisely an ancient goal of Italian colonial policy. Libya can also exert pressure eastward against the bordering Egypt. Italian newspapers have even toyed with the idea of conquering Egypt from Libya and occupying the Suez Canal.

Hummel-Siewert, in his book, "Der Mittelmeerraum," published in 1936, writes:

"The geopolitical situation is so compelling that Italy can never surrender Tunisia. The concession which Mussolini made to Laval in January, 1935, in the conversations at Rome regarding the status of the Italians in Tunisia, can be viewed merely as a tactical measure of temporary character.

"Tunisia with Biserta means for France a valuable possession, for Italy an always attractive goal . . . It was a grave mistake on Italy's part to delay the occupation of Tunisia so long until the French got ahead of her in 1881."

Margret Boveri, editor of the Berlin Tageblatt, refers also to the Mussolini-Laval agreement of 1935 in her book, "Das Weltgeschehen im Mittelmeer," published in 1937. Since the Abyssinian crisis, she declares, "little friendly spirit has persisted. Both parties know that the Tunisian question is not settled. The Italians have a moral right to Tunisia if painstaking pioneering work on primitive soil can create a right to its possession."

"Sardinia," continues Boveri, "reaches out on three sides: menacingly around the sister-island of Corsica on the north, demandingly toward Tunisia on the south, and westward it menaces the French connections with North Africa, this vital artery of the French empire."

Balbo's Assignment May Have Not Been Banishment.

WHEN BALBO was sent to Libya as its governor, it was generally believed that this was equivalent to banishment; that he had fallen out of favor with Mussolini. Boveri writes—and the intimate relations between Rome and Berlin, quite aside from other factors in the situation, make it probable in high degree that her interpretation is correct:

"We know today that Mussolini sent the youngest and perhaps most capable of his lieutenants to a post which is the point from which a new development is to begin, an important strategic position for the first trial of strength. For it could not easily be foreseen that the English (in the Abyssinian conflict) would surrender so easily. And in case they should not recede, Libya was more important than Eritrea . . .

"Italy will take the English in Egypt and the Sudan between the jaws of a vise and crush them. The jaws of that vise are Libya and Eritrea-Abyssinia. The attack on the Sudan can succeed. This would be the place where the vise must come together. The advance eastward must come from Eritrea-Abyssinia to meet that from Libya.

"Today's boundaries are not yet 40 years old. Why should they not, as so many other boundaries, be crossed again and new boundaries established?"

Here, presented by commentators who may be presumed to know more about Mussolini's plans than is vouchsafed to outsiders, is an outlook for plenty of trouble. But according to them, new African possessions are only a part of the program. Here is Hummel-Siewert again:

"The fact that the inhabitants of Corsica incline to Italy racially and lingually emphasizes Italian claims to this important island, whose economic value is out of proportion to its strategic importance. . . .

"Nice and Savoy are also districts to which Italy has never abandoned her claim. Hence France can, in certain circumstances, be exposed here to heavy political pressure. Savoy is moreover the cradle of the Italian royal house. The population in both districts is, to be sure, predominantly French, but there is a considerable Italian element in Nice.

"Fascism is today carefully looking after Italians living abroad. Hence it is easily possible that some day an Italian irredenta can come into existence on French soil, with all the political consequences of such an occurrence. Let us not forget that Provence was once a Roman province."

One Optimist

By Albert Larnard

A Call For "Conscious Evolution."

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO, when the first cracks became definitely visible in the solid, optimistic surface of our mostly democratic Western world, William James brought forth his "Essays in Radical Empiricism" and "The Will to Believe." In clear and intelligible language, fortified not only by his scientific training, but also by his practical experience, he presented a workable faith and pointed a direct way, amid the stresses and turmoil of an increasingly complex society, to truth and the good life. In the rising babel of tongues, his was a voice stimulating and hopeful to the man in search of any everyday philosophy, a defense against doubt and skepticism.

The 25 years have gone and with them the war, and also a considerable portion of democracy as well as man's faith in his world and his old beliefs. James' pluralistic universe remains and the problems which confront the philosopher have, it would seem, increased a thousandfold. For mere skepticism has turned to synicism and unbelief, complexity has become confusion. Man is overcome by fear, pessimism and uncertainty. The cracks in the surface are now deep fissures, and the earth has quaked into an unbelievable state. Such is the modern world to the thinker and to the man in the street.

• • • •

IT IS IN THIS WORLD that Viscount Samuel is so bold as to point a new way, in his short, tightly written and accurate treatise on the politics, religion, nationalism and mind of man as they exist here and now. Standing much where James stood, but with the enemy closer upon him, deserted by many an intellectual who is still in flight, or who has found sanctuary in new social and political dogmas, he talks with equanimity and courage of a new faith based upon truth, a new life of reason founded upon causality, a new political world which recognizes man in his entire personality instead of as a functional being in a vast workshop.

From his background, it will be seen that here speaks no armchair philosopher. During a career developed first in sound scholarship, Viscount Samuel has become not only president of the British Institute of Philosophy, but at times has been also home secretary, chairman of the coal commission and high commissioner in Palestine. In the years when Europe has been seething with new creeds, new political doctrine, new violence, he has been a man of action. At the same moment he has been a part of the main stream of the thought of his day, both scientific and philosophic.

With rare comprehensiveness and lack of prejudice, accompanied by a great simplicity of treatment, he has portrayed the underlying thought of the day in science, philosophy, politics and economics. Then he has made a valiant effort to reconcile the apparently irreconcilable, to harmonize one of the most completely atonal outbursts in all modern history.

In this short book he states and restates his credo, which is, if summarization be possible, that all depends upon man himself, in intelligent action founded upon truth, conceived in liberty, executed in the light of empirical standards which are known to be workable. Conscious evolution he holds to be the principle of this action, a modification of environment with deliberate purpose.

• • • •

STARTING WITH THE WORLD AROUND US and the new scientific outlook, the pessimism of scientists included, he insists that mind—which is to say, reason—applied to his affairs of life and working empirically, is the solution for modern man. Causation can be traced. It is never variable, but a constant factor in Nature. It is for man to turn this knowledge to his own use, to determine effect through first learning cause, and to proceed again from effect to cause, in the endless concatenation of nonfortuitous incident which makes up the sum of human conduct throughout the world.

Such quasi-mystical phrases as "the blind forces of Nature" have no place in this credo, for they have no real meaning. Intuition as a substitute for reason is to be combated, and an ethical basis is postulated for the conduct of life, rather than adherence to old religious beliefs and dogmas. This philosopher hints, if no more, that regression to the old religion and its forms will prove nothing for man today; in fact, will hinder him in the solution of his major problems.

A religion is needed by men, but only a religion warm and human, corporate and poetic. Truth shall be its one foundation, and truth is a quality of the rational, which is not proved to be contrary to the spiritual element of life. When religion seeks as earnestly as philosophy or science to put truth first, our emotions need no longer be opposed to our intellect.

• • • •

FROM RELIGION the argument passes naturally to the question of right and wrong, of the fact of evil, of property and poverty. No issues are dodged, no false premises set forth. In the chapters on "Liberty," "The Nation and the World," "Conditions of Peace," the writer passes in review over the misconceived doctrine underlying fascism, its reliance upon intuition and hero worship, Hegelian metaphysic and mysticism, upon such Spenglerian verbiage as "Destiny" and "Spirit of the Age," used to connote supposedly mysterious hidden forces which drive men and nations on to certain, perhaps tragic ends, when it is only man himself plus infallible laws of Nature which have made him what he is.

"We cannot grasp it all, so we do not understand why things happen. Because of our ignorance, we speak of destiny. There is a void and we try to fill it with an abstraction. But ignorance is negative, and you cannot turn it into a positive by calling it destiny. The positive is the continuous succession of intermingling causes, with effects that are further causes. 'Fate,' said Emerson, 'is unpenetrated cause.'"

OF THAT MODERN FETISH, the materialistic concept of history, Viscount Samuel has this to say: "It is a falsification of politics . . . That there is an economic factor in history is certain . . . But to see in the evolution of a civilization nothing more than a material process, to find in it no spiritual or rational purpose, is to take a biased and distorted view of the record of mankind in thought and action . . ."

There follows a description of the British social, political and economic electicism, which is, in fact, not to be named a system at all. On the whole, it has had somewhat systematic results, with liberty as a condition of its existence. But Viscount Samuel does not stop with exposition of its virtues as opposed to the tyranny of forms which have followed the collapse of democracy. He gives this warning: "The owning classes could fall into no greater error than to suppose that if property is to survive, poverty must be accepted also. The opposite is more likely to be true. If poverty continues, the property system will not."

For conditions of peace, Viscount Samuel postulates a new honesty of recognition of the needs of the "have-nots." He decries the League of Nations as a body which functions only in a judicial sense, in that its purpose is the maintenance of the status quo of 1918. As such, he says, it will continue to fail. But Viscount Samuel believes it should be expanded into a world parliament, having certain powers as well, with the democratic powers ready to meet the rightful grievances of others. In the meantime he is no pacifist, so long as the militarists are loose and the doctrine of the absolute power of the state survives.

• • • •

IT IS A SELF-CONSCIOUS AGE, ready to plead guilty to all accusations, ashamed of the great war, angry and bewildered. Its symptoms in an individual would be classed as neurotic at least. Let this age take confidence in itself is the final word of this book. It is too diffident. It is unique in having grasped something of the process which has brought us to where we are. Looking backward and forward, men are able to see themselves as factors in the process and able in a measure to guide it. Conscious evolution becomes the principle of our action.

McCARTHY.

Frankly, it was the name that first brought it to this column's attention. I wondered what in the world they were talking about. They were listed in their own program as the "Middle Atlantic Fruit Growers' Conference."

So I went up to the tenth floor of one of the downtown hotels to learn about apples. The fruit growers part of the title was only a half truth. They were apple raisers.

There was, in fact, something reassuring in the make-up of their gathering. About 200 of them huddled together in a very modernistic green room and they all had healthy, outdoor complexions and disposed of almost as many cigars as a gathering at an Elks' smoker.

But the tension was terrific. You could almost hear the wing beats of the Oriental fruit moth. There was an undertone of international knavery which left the Panay incident in the shade.

• • • •

"I'LL TELL you my own experience," the bald, stout man said. And everybody leaned forward with the breathless expectancy of a group of believers about to gain the lowdown on a fellow member at an Oxford Group house party.

"When I spray," said the stout man (identified in the program as Dr. Thomas J. Headley, entomologist) "I strike at the worm, the egg and the moth!"

There was something reassuring in that. It partook of solid citizenship. And the apple growers settled back a little more comfortably in their chairs.

Then Dr. Headley went on to tell how a mixture of deadly poisons, nicotine and arsenic, might be employed to gain upper hand on the Oriental fruit moth.

But the alarming thing about the conference discussions was the number and delicacy of the problems in bringing a single apple to rosy maturity. The air was thick with talk of Albemarle Pippins, Black Macks, Maiden Blushes, Rhode Island Greenings and Red Astrachans, but lurking in the background and possibly scouting overhead there was that talk of coddling moths and Oriental fruit flies.

"Some cultural practices," said Dr. Headley, "encourage the fruit insects." But they let that pass for the time, though you could hear a slight murmur of wonder from certain radical sectors of the conference room. And then somebody called him.

"Dr. Headley," said one of the apple growers, "what cultural practices do you refer to as beneficent to the various types of fruit moths?" There was a note of the inflamed inquisitor in his tone and the apple growers turned their heads to observe the daring fruitman who would beard Dr. Headley in his own domain.

"By cultural practices encouraging to the fruit moth . . ." said Dr. Headley, and then he hesitated a bit. The room wavered with almost apprehensive attention.

"I mean," said Dr. Headley, "the cultural practice of allowing weeds to grow under the trees." His inquisitor sat down.

• • • •

THEY DIDN'T take up the care and feeding of the immature apple at the session I attended . . . but they did hold forth a bit on the bathing and drying of the apple.

A Mr. Carpenter instructed the delegates on that score and it brought the drama in the room to a fever pitch. An apple, it appeared, is no casual inhabitant of a fruit stand, to be polished with a clean handkerchief and sold, two-for-a-nickel.

"Don't," said Mr. Carpenter, "crack the tender skin of an apple with a temperature of 120 degrees! An apple has a tolerance to heat only up to a certain degree. It can stand 110 degrees for a matter of only 45 seconds."

There was no particular tone of pathos in his voice as he pointed out the danger-fraught excesses which should be avoided in washing an apple. He simply told them with bare and authoritative force. And five conference members ceased to puff their cigars while he laid down the law.

You could see that conscience was bothering them. They had no doubt been scalding apples for years.

But the cosmic conclusion from all of this is, simply, that if the apple growers are undergoing all this these hectic days, to say nothing of politics and the war in China, life is getting just a bit too complicated. Because the banana growers and the wheat growers and the hog raisers have probably equally overwhelming problems.

And it does sort of set one longing for the old days when a tree was a tree and an apple was an apple and an Oriental fruit moth was just a worm.

A Lone Writer Gets a Sample Dose of Paint

Our Correspondent Tastes Thrill of a Hollywood Makeup Chair.

By Frederick C. Othman.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Jan. 4.—R-K-O today gave us a look at ourself as we'll be 43 years from now. It wasn't a pleasant sight. Neither was it easily accomplished.

The scene was the mirror-lined sanctum of Chief Makeup Artist Jim Barker, who said he could make anybody look 75 years old.

"Even you," he said, pointing at us. "Will it come off?" we demanded. He said it would, so we climbed into his de luxe barber chair, and stayed for two solid hours on the seat where Katharine Hepburn, Fred Astaire and many another star sits every day while Barker makes 'em look as nature never intended.

After putting an apron around our neck, Barker painted our face, ears included, a nice mahogany brown.

"Now wrinkle your forehead," he said. We did and he applied flesh-colored paint over the brown. When we relaxed, permanent brown wrinkles remained. We helped him make similar wrinkles around our eyes by squinting, and by then we were 50 years old, anyway.

Barker painted drooping shadows on our cheeks. He outlined hetrims of our eyes with a thin line of white, to make them seem pale and watery.

"Nice job," we complimented him. "It's just the beginning," he said, pasting fish-skin patches under each eye. When they had dried, he applied a yellow plastic material, to make bags, and what a sight they turned out to be!

Goo on a Toothbrush.

He painted our red eyebrows white, and made 'em bushy, like Vice President Garner's. Our permanent pink mustache wasn't big enough; neither was it the right color. He made it a pale gray, with goo on a toothbrush, and he added more hair of the same shade, hair by hair, gluing each one securely to our upper lip.

When he had finished, we had a mustache as magnificent as any on a bonded whisky label. It was a good solid one, too. Pull it off, Barker said, and our lip would come with it.

The next step was the toughest. We had plenty of deep wrinkles and hollow places in our cheeks, but our skin still looked too young.

"It must look like old parchment," Barker said. He took a finely pointed pencil of black pigment, and with the touch of an artist finishing a portrait, he made tiny criss-crosses all over our face and neck.

When all was complete, he placed on our head a gray wig, parted on the left, and cemented it to our brow. He messed it up a bit with a brush, so it would look as if we'd been scratching it, and he said:

"Look in the mirror!"

"Meanest Man in the World."

Glaring back at us was the meanest, most cantankerous old codger we ever saw. When we winked our eye, he winked his and he looked—well, "lecherous" is the only word. He was dissipated, as if from drinking too much gin. He was so old, so ugly and so repulsive that we shuddered. He shuddered, too.

"So that's us in 1981," me mourned.

"Yep," said Barker, "that's you, then."

We urged him, quickly, to wash off our makeup and end this demonstration of clairvoyancy. Washing it off was harder than painting it on.

He used oil to mop the grease paint on a towel. He soaked the fish skins under our eyes with hot water and ripped them up like old adhesive plaster. He removed the glue with carbon tetrachloride, which dry cleaners use to remove gravy from vests. He unglued our wig, scrubbed our eyebrows with soap, dug the black from our ears and eventually returned us to 1938. We never were so glad before to see our face in the mirror.

Regular Stint for Stars.

Every movie star must go through this same process every day. For a young and handsome woman, like La Hepburn, or Irene Dunne, another of Barker's regular customers, it's not so bad.

"The toughest job of all," he said, "is making an old man look young."

We wouldn't mention any names, but he said a wrinkle's a wrinkle and covering it with enough paint to keep the camera from seeing it is a real trick.

Barker talked about the history of makeup in the movies and about how he and his fellow artists had borrowed methods from such diverse technicians as beauty shop operators—and embalmers.

His hardest makeup job—apart from the one he did on us—he said, was one that took him three hours every day for months in England a few years back, making chubby Charles Laughton look like a portrait of King Henry VIII.

"That portrait used to leer at me," Barker said.

War Film Is Boon To the Chinese

War in China has proven an unsought and unexpected boon to the scores of Chinese who depend for a livelihood on the film industry.

At present, several hundred of them are working as bit, part and extra players in "Shanghai Deadline," the first picture to treat realistically with the war in the Far East.

A number of other pictures also laid against the background of the present struggle, it is reported, have been projected by other studios and so the Chinese actors appear assured of almost continuous employment for a good many months during the coming year.

Costs High.

George Ernest, the 13-year-old candid camera hound of the Jones Family series, currently making "Love on a Budget," complains of the high cost of living. "You know," said George earnestly, "I have to pay 90 cents a quart for my film developer now; used to be 35 cents. It's keeping me broke."

Duna Signs.

Steffi Duna, fiery little Hungarian actress, has been signed to play the role of a gypsy spitfire in "Gypsy," Jane Withers' newest picture.

'Drop-That-Gun-Podner' Drama Takes Command Of Local Screens for the Week Beginning Friday

"Wells Fargo" and "The Bad Man of Brimstone" Bring the "Western" Into Full Bloom in the Capital; Two Post Columnists on View; "Spring Thaw" Carries on; Film Star Visits Briefly; Notes.

THE cinema amusement scene is about to assume a new complexion in Washington.

After many weeks that have been devoted primarily to the exhibition of gay comedies, fabulous filmusicals and sophisticated drama, the "Western" is about to come into its own, as the saying is.

BELL.

Outside of the metropolitan centers, "its own," in the case of the "Western," is practically a top spot in the estimation of the public. One suspects that next week in the Capital's ace temples of the gyrating gelatins will witness a similar eminence of the so-called "horse opera," for two exceedingly ample reasons.

With "Wells Fargo" coming to the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater on Friday, and "The Bad Man of Brimstone" to Loew's Capitol on the same day, drama of the "wide open spaces" will experience such a renaissance as it has not enjoyed locally since a time a little beyond the normal reaches of a particularly bad memory.

Here are two screen subjects executed in the grand manner by their respective producers. Unfortunately neither, as yet, has been viewed by this department. Too many official chores prevented attendance at yesterday's preview of "Bad Man" and "Wells Fargo" is not being unspooled for the guys and gals of the press until this afternoon at 1:30. However, there are a few known salient facts concerning both that give augury of a wild-shootin' week of exciting and robust entertainment.

The seriousness with which this form of melodramatic pastime is taken by the powers-that-be in the wiggle picture industry is best exemplified by the casts that have been assembled for the films under discussion. There is not a dud in the entire roster of principals of "Bad Man," and "Wells Fargo" boasts a similar distinction of personnel. The former brings together again in the same picture—for the first time in many months—those two tough hombres known as the Beery brothers, Wallace and Noah. They are supported by such luminaries as Lewis S. Stone, Bruce Cabot, Charley Grapewin, Virginia Bruce, Joseph Galleia, Guy Kibbee, Cliff "Ukulele Ike" Edwards, Arthur Hohl and Robert Barrat. If that doesn't spell trouble for the peace-lovers I do not know what might.

In the Frank Lloyd epic of American transportation—that would be "Wells Fargo"—Joel McCrea, Frances Dee (his wife) and Bob Burns are cast in the stellar assignments, given the support of a cast that literally consumes two pages of closely printed names. That seems incredible, but the expansive story visualized in this subject is such as to demand the united effort of a mammoth ensemble.

I can think of few among the cinema's great directors more competent to realize the full potentialities of a drama of such dimensions than Frank Lloyd. He may have done a few mediocre things in the lower brackets, but all of his "big pictures" have been "wows," from the day of "The Sea Hawk" down to date.

Next week will be a week of fast, more or less, for those who have no palate for strong meat.

• • • •

Incidentally—and not so very, at that—next week will make known to the reading public of the National Capital two of The Post's ace columnists, through the medium of the screen. Bob Burns, doing a character role of prime importance in "Wells Fargo," appears daily on the comic page of this stalwart family journal, and Jimmy Fidler, Hollywood's ace commentator, is read daily—I hope—on this page, or the one opposite. The chatterbox Mr. Fidler will be seen for the first time on a Washington screen in a two-reel subject bearing the title of "Personality Parade," to be shown at Loew's Palace in conjunction with Samuel Goldwyn's picturization of "The Hurricane," beginning Friday. Mr. Fidler was seen momentarily, once or twice, in a Hollywood "clip" of a popular newsreel, but never before has he appeared here in a short-reel of this nature. "Personality Parade" is believed to be the most comprehensive survey of Hollywood's eminents so far released. To name all of the stars and starlets who appear in it would be equivalent to copying the Hollywood "Who's Who," or the telephone book, or something—except that most of them aren't listed in the telephone book!

• • • •

Max Gordon's production of "Spring Thaw," the Clare Kummer comedy written as a stellar vehicle for her son-in-law, Roland Young, and seen last week for the first time on any stage in the National Theater, is not closing in Baltimore Saturday night, after all.

It is Mr. Claude P. Greneker, of the Shubert high command, in town for specific purposes which will be disclosed in this space tomorrow, who confides that the preliminary run of the piece has been extended to include at least Boston and Philadelphia. When they were here last week, both Mr. Gordon and Miss Kummer felt that they "had something" in this fragile item which could be made to cash in at the box-office with a little judicious tinkering. They are still tinkering, evidently with some success.

I wish them all good luck, even if Miss Kummer and Mr. Young both are a bit "difficult" as subjects of radio interviewers. These family parties ought to be encouraged, if for no other reason, to dispel the comic supplement notion of the usual relationships existing between son-in-law and his wife's mother. Here is a happy family that really is happy. But I still feel that Roland Young must be the original fellow to whom was addressed that classic line, "Oh, so you won't talk, eh?" He certainly wouldn't.

• • • •

Sir Cedric Hardwicke, star of "Shadow and Substance," current at the National Theater, has been invited by Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner interests in the Washington territory, to see "Tovarich," now on the screen at the Earle. Sir Cedric played the role of Prince Mikail in the London stage production of the play so deftly filmed by the Freres Warner. The part was created in this country by John Halliday and portrayed in this city early this season by Rudolf Forster, with Marta Abba opposite. In the screen version, Claudette Colbert appears in the role of the Grand Duchess, done on the stage by Miss Abba, which, to me, seems just a shade on the side of the incongruous—but I haven't seen the picture yet.

• • • •

Speaking of Sir Cedric reminds me that the sturdy lads in the composing room have done me a million good turns the past few centuries—that would be at the rate of about one a month since I have been annoying you daily—but even they sometimes go as magnificently crazy as I do in the florid pandemonium of a breakfast-time deadline and makeup.

That, probably, is how it comes about that in yesterday morning's review of "Shadow and Substance" I discover a new word by the name of "disgured." The boys downstairs evidently didn't care a "fig" for the second syllable of that one. Then in the third paragraph there is something to the effect that "Shadow and Substance" is "a dream that deals delicately and discreetly, etc." There being no "dream" involved in the fashioning of the play, I suspect that the word should have been "drama." And there was something about a "sure and mellow light," a little further along. I think it should have been "pure and mellow."

Maybe what I ought to do is pin a new ribbon on my typewriter—which I already have done, if you have to know everything.

• • • •

The diners in a popular short-flight-down eating place on Thirteenth street, just below F, last evening at about 6:30, who thought that there was a noted actor in their midst were entirely correct. He was Louis Calhern, last seen on a local screen, I believe, in an important supporting role with Paul Muni in "The Life of Emile Zola." Mr. Calhern stopped off briefly en route to New York with a friend whose daughter happens to be appearing in the cast of "Shadow and Substance," at the National. They are traveling in some style in their own car, about the size of one of those streamlined Deisel palaces on wheels, with a private chauffeur, private stock and a lot of public business. So now you know.

• • • •

It is not violating any release dates, I think, to reveal that two important announcements, of interest to all Washingtonians, will appear in this space tomorrow. Order your copy of The Post early—and don't forget I warned you! (Advt.)

Firty-Times-on-the-Blackboard Note.

Returns After Long Absence

distinguished British star of stage and screen, who will be seen on a local screen for the first time in many months in the title role of "Dr. Syn," a new Gaumont British production, opening at the Metropolitan Theater on Friday of this week. John Loder and Margaret Lockwood lead the support.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Jan. 4.—Memories that bless and burn: When Ina Claire told me—about six months before she divorced him—that in John Gilbert she had found her "long sought" ideal When Elinor Glynn was the queen of Hollywood society and anyone on her black list was an outcast. When Barbara Stanwyck, suffering from a sprained back, defied her doctors and worked in a plaster cast for two weeks in order to finish a picture.

INA CLAIRE.

• • • •

When a hare-brained publicity man installed a siren in the hills near Bela Lugosi's canyon home; it wailed every dark night and terrified the neighborhood. When Dorothy Mackaill scandalized the crowd in a downtown night club by dancing the Charleston on a table-top. When Janet Gaynor walked off a Fox set in a huff after being told that she looked like her rival, Lillian Harvey. When John Boles, then struggling for recognition, went without lunches for two months in order to buy an antique chair.

• • • •

When Nelson Eddy told me he would never sign a radio contract because it would cheapen his voice. When Metro rented a hippopotamus for one of the early jungle pictures, installed it in Malibu Lake for a scene—and spent the next week trying to recapture it. When the Maryland Board of Censors banned a Mickey Mouse cartoon because Mickey kissed Minnie on the neck.

• • • •

A tribute is due Cecil B. DeMille for his consideration of filmdon's old-timers. Before starting a new picture, he always gives his assistant a long list of names—204 of them, in all—and an absolute order that each of those people must be given work, either in bits or as extras. That list is a "Who's who" of yesteryear. Such names as Clara Kimball Young, Fritzie Brunette, Jean Acker, Florence Turner, Rosemary Theby, Mary McLaren and Florence Lawrence are included—all former stars who now need work. The most interesting old-timer of them all, perhaps, is Billy Elmer. He appeared in DeMille's first picture, "The Squaw Man," produced way back yonder in 1913. And he has worked in every DeMille picture filmed since then.

• • • •

In view of all the stories which have been written about the Garbo's enormous salary, you can imagine my surprise today when Director Clarence Brown solemnly assured me that she was not the highest paid player in her new picture, "Conquest." The actor who drew top-money was a 3-week-old baby named Cleve Traughber. He was carried through one scene, which required exactly 30 seconds. And for that brief appearance his wage was $75. At any rate, his salary per hour would be $9,000—and that is something like 30 times as much as Garbo has been able to extract from M-G-M.

• • • •

Bob Montgomery prides himself on being the most outspoken man in all Hollywood. He pans producers with abandon, takes delight in ranting at the more sacred poo-bahs of the press and thinks nothing of slipping a verbal knife into the gullet of the most famous writers. Today, in the studio cafe, he was maintaining the glory of free speech, and one of the girls in the publicity department hurled a challenge: "You're not blunt enough to give me an answer to one little question—and let me publish it," she scoffed. Bob bridled. "All right, Big Shot," said she, "who, in your opinion, is the most attractive woman in pictures." Bob struggled valiantly for a moment and then discretion got the best of valor. "Aw, nuts," he said, a bit inelegantly. "You win—I have to work with 'em."

Henie Optioned For Three More

Immediately following completion of Sonja Henie's third and latest picture, "Happy Landing," Darryl F. Zanuck exercised the option on the skating star's contract for another year.

With only two pictures so far released, Sonja Henie is already rated as one of the greatest box-office stars in the motion picture industry. Her first picture, "One in a Million," was 20th Century-Fox's biggest box-office winner of the past year, and her second, "Thin Ice," topped that record.

Her new term calls for three pictures to be made during the coming year, but owing to the lavish production plans now being made for her forthcoming pictures it looks doubtful whether she will be able to make more than two during that period.

Chandler Offered Lead in New Play

Chick Chandler, 20th Century-Fox comic who has just completed a role in "City Girl" with Phyllis Brooks and Ricardo Cortez, has been offered the lead in Samson Raphaelson's new play, "Magnificent Heel," which is soon to be produced at the Lobero Theater in Santa Barbara by Arthur Beckhard, and then taken to the New York stage.

Also in Person

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

"Living in Wrong Neighborhood," Mother Asks How to Help Daughter Make Friends.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I wonder if you can please tell me how I can help my daughter meet some congenial young people of her own age. She is 20 years old, intelligent, and of great personal beauty, but she is shy and retiring and we find it difficult to help her overcome this reserve. You see, we are handicapped by living in what is definitely the wrong neighborhood.

• • • •

People pronounce the name of our street with an intonation that shames us, but with five persons living on one Government salary (in the lower bracket, at that) it's really all we feel able to afford. This makes us ashamed to ask people to our house and my daughter avoids, if it is at all possible, telling our address. I know it takes a lot of grace for her tell some young person that she lives on this particular street.

• • • •

My daughter has a temporary appointment in one of the Government departments, but she is the youngest person in her bureau, and finds no congenial acquaintances there. We are rather self-contained as a family, I am afraid, and have made few real friends here, but I do want my daughter to have the gayety and youthful pleasure that should be hers. Can you help me, Miss Haworth? With deep appreciation of your consideration of my problem, sincerely yours, MRS. A. J. M.

• • • •

The Thing to Do.

DEAR MRS. A. J. M.: Obviously, the only solution of this problem is to move to a so-called "better address." Your daughter's lonely self-containment won't be alleviated in the least by meeting "congenial young people of her own age," so long as she is ashamed to invite such persons to her home. You will be sparing her unnecessary embarrassment by postponing any social campaign on her behalf until after the family has established itself in a neighborhood that she feels no need to apologize for.

• • • •

Finding livable quarters in what conventional-minded persons consider the right neighborhood, at a rental one can afford—even the lowest rental—is not so impossible an assignment as you seem to believe. It is a job, yes. Sometimes a big job; sometimes a comparatively easy one, if you happen to have a streak of luck, but in either case, it has to be tackled with determination and a spirit of never-say-die optimism.

• • • •

The initial step is to make up your mind, with calm finality, that you are going to live in a certain section of the city—be this northwest, northeast, southwest or southeast, or in a suburban village or its outskirts. Having narrowed the field to one specific area, acquire first-hand knowledge of every type of low-cost housing actually or potentially available there. Talk with rental agents, comb the "for rent" listings in the classified advertising columns of the daily and Sunday newspapers, tour the modest streets on foot or by motor, if you have n car or the use of one. Ring doorbells and stop friendly faced persons on the streets and ask questions. Inspect long-vacant properties and submit bold propositions to their owners or agents; have an eye out for English basement apartments, for light housekeeping rooms, for whole floors in old houses, or for inside court apartments in old apartment buildings. Look for apartments over business properties.

• • • •

Establish no mentally self-defeating limit of any sort to the kind of place you will consider, providing it is in a locality to your liking, so far as street name and number and type of neighbor is concerned. I know of one homemaker whose income was suddenly and drastically reduced some years ago, who has continued to live in such neighborhoods as she had been accustomed to and preferred, because she had the inventiveness, first, to make a basement apartment into a charmingly livable place for herself and her three grown children; and later, to do the same with a great studio-like place that had once been a stable. This person did just what I am advising you to do—gave all her spare time and thought to the business of finding a place that would do, in a neighborhood that pleased her fancy, until that place had been found.

• • • •

You will find (and this I know to be true; it is not mere optimistic theory) that rents are not always scaled according to neighborhood. One who seeks indefatigably the gratifying exception inevitably finds it, if he has the imagination to recognize it when he comes upon it. Don't hesitate to explore the more imposing apartment buildings. Often they have surprising bargains for those who are willing to yield certain conveniences.

• • • •

Don't be in too big a hurry to make the change. Tell your daughter of your decision to move, and why. Ask her co-operation in finding the right place. Let her spend her evenings, week-ends and holidays supplementing your purposeful explorations. Since she has no congenial friends or acquaintances at the moment, and wouldn't dare entertain them if she had, the business of house-hunting should keep her more or less happily occupied until she is in a position to launch herself socially.

• • • •

When that time comes, I suggest she join the young people's group of the new neighborhood church; a dancing class, if she can afford to out of her earnings; and a night study class or two in one of the night schools conducted by public school system of the city. In such groups she is bound to make congenial acquaintances, sooner or later, and if she feels free to let them drop her off at home, and to invite them in that moment or for a later specified date, such acquaintanceships are found to develop eventually into wholesome friendships. But the sensitive person who is ashamed of his home, or the neighborhood in which his family lives, is automatically cut off from contemporary social interchange, no matter how great his personal attractiveness, nor how intense his yearning for and need of companionship may be.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

The one thing that everybody agrees is best for a cold is rest. And it is the one thing that usually is neglected.

I mean rest in bed. If that alone is done in the first day or two of a cold, it would do more to safeguard against the possible hazards of the convalescence than all the medicine in the world. It would shorten the entire period of discomfort—the long-drawn-out hawking and coughing and snuffling.

But everything seems to conspire against doing it. Colds come at inconvenient times. You are needed at the office. Or for the housewife, sister and the children are coming to visit. There is an examination at school, or there is especially heavy work at the store. Anyway, it's just a cold, and the idea of going to bed for a little thing like that is sort of sissy.

So the rest in bed is discarded. And one of the healthfulest acts you could do for yourself is left undone.

Rest in Bed.

Because with rest in bed, an attack of grippe or cold might be a good thing. There used to be a theory that an attack of typhoid fever—after the debilitating effects were over and, of course, always provided you recovered from it—would eventually be beneficial because it "would clean out the system." The old housewife preached that gospel, but when I was studying medicine it was greeted with scorn by all the ultra-scientific members of the faculty.

But that was before this new fever treatment was found to be beneficial for everything from social diseases and arthritis to alcoholism. Perhaps the old housewives were right, and the fever of typhoid accomplished the same work as the modern fever machine. In the same way, the fever and toxemia of a cold can be beneficial. But this is provided the proper conditions for their operation are observed—and that means rest in bed.

Relieves Symptoms.

As for other treatment, it is largely designed to relieve symptoms. In the latest edition of Cecil's "Text Book of Medicine," the revised article on the common cold brings the information right down to date, mentions local applications and these medicines—aspirin, phenacetin, codeine, Dover's powder, papaverine, and the induction of sweating.

The subject of local applications in colds is an interesting one, which we will take up tomorrow.

Have an Indoor Garden

THE GAY scarlet of the poinsettia blossoms! Enjoy their cheery glow in your home for many weeks to come by keeping your plant in a terrarium—a covered fish bowl makes a good one.

In its little glass house the poinsettia gets just what it needs—moisture and protection from drafts. All you have to do is water the plant when it looks thirsty. So snug does your poinsettia feel it blooms merrily away for two months.

Will it bloom again? Certainly. You have only to pot the plant, cut it back and give it a rest of two or three months in a dark spot. The cuttings will grow into new plants, your old plant will send up decorative foliage—and they'll all bloom lavishly next season.

This is the time of the year to start the gorgeous amaryllis too. Pot the bulb so its neck and shoulders are above the soil, water it just enough to keep it from shriveling and keep in a cool, dark place. When the stem is three inches high put your plant in a sunny spot, water it generously. Your amaryllis will send up many stalks, each bearing a magnificent lily like flower.

And as a foliage background for your indoor garden, nothing gives more year-round satisfaction than the aspidistra. Neglect it, tuck it away in a dull corner, it faithfully sends up its graceful green leaves. No wonder it's called the iron plant.

Many more pointers on easy-to-raise indoor gardens are given in our 40-page booklet, "Success With House Plants and Flowers." How to grow bulbs, vines, ferns, flowering plants. Tips on repotting, pests, summer care.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Success With House Plants and Flowers," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Muff Handbags.

Muffs that follow the fur or fabric of a coat are shown to serve double purposes—as handbags or again, by virtue of hidden fasteners, they may be transformed into fur collars or sets of pockets for plain coats.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Jan. 4.

THE NEW YEAR, so far, has brought no let-up in the streams of pretty girls pouring into New York seeking jobs as models and mannequins. So much publicity has this strange posing life received of late, that the ladies now crave such a career as much as they did movie work in the dear old days before the screen learned to squeak.

ALICE HUGHES.

I keep in constant touch with this model situation, owing to the nature of my daily job. I look at these slim and lovely girls almost daily, and know many of them. I also know the agents who book them from here to there. Two of the most prominent are men, John Powers and Walter Thornton, and they are eloquent on the subject of their beauteous stock in trade.

Walter, for instance, tells me that the average professional life of a model is about 7 years. After that, unless she marries, she must seek some other way of collecting a living. He also says that mere beauty is no longer sufficient for a good model. She must also know how to act, owing to the current popularity of these candid camera fashion pictures, in which the girls are striding along or hopping into the air and registering ecstasy.

At present, there is an enormous demand for baby models, and I mean little babies. The Dionne influence? Thornton says the baby models make a lot of money, but are difficult subjects. Ask a bigger baby for a smile and you get it—but you can't guarantee a grin from a tiny one. Thus busy cameras may wait a long and costly time before the angel child delivers just the needed expression.

Thornton himself married a model, and their 2½-year-old girl has already posed for many ads herself. So he knows his business.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—"The Little Church Round the Corner," scene of so many thousands of marriages, had a grand one the other day. One of the features of the ceremony was a resounding barytone rendition of "O Perfect Love" by the famous Reinald Werrenrath. He honored the wedding with his presence and voice because his own pretty daughter, Dorothy, was being joined in holy wedlock to young Mr. Carlton Brown Hutchins, jr., of Chicago. Lucky were the chance visitors to the famous "Little Church" on that occasion!

• • • •

Of all the town characters, one of the most interesting is "Mr. First." His real name is Omero Catan, and for nine years he has devoted much of his time to being first into new subways and buildings, and across fresh bridges. When not reaping fame thus, he sells vacuum cleaners. "Mr. First" has now crowned his career by being first paying passenger through the new Lincoln Tunnel under the Hudson, having waited 30 hours in his car for this colossal honor. Strange the fancies that bloom in the human skull!

• • • •

The city's itself again, for Katharine Cornell is back from a brief European trip. She says she has decided to postpone that long-proposed world tour, owing to the troubles now besetting all parts of this unhappy earth. Wise girl, Kit! Stay right here at home, for we always need you on our stage.

• • • •

Betty Goodwin, fashion editor of one of the great radio chains, is wearing a brace to straighten her teeth—tells me she's wanted to ever since she was a little girl, but just got around to it now. There's a bit of correction going on in my family, too—my young Martin is in the hospital just now having his prominent ears trained down a bit, which I think is as important as tooth-gadgets and corrective shoes. I hope he'll thank me for it later.

• • • •

Inspecting recent evening dresses, I find that shoulders are being covered, even though the frocks are cut very low in front. And the rather garish hair ornaments, so popular in the autumn, are now largely replaced by veils thrown over the head. Heigho, the whirl of fashion! Let's not try to keep up at all, for it's a stern, chase. Let's just wear our old black!

La Dietrich Still Likes Pajamas for House Wear

Paris (U.P.).—Marlene Dietrich indulged her penchant for trousers in a recent shopping tour in Paris when she selected four pairs of house pajamas at Schiaparelli to wear for informal entertaining in Hollywood.

Rich fabrics and warm colors make the pajama costumes of the season as luxurious as the evening gowns, and yet they remain the most practical and comfortable of home costumes. Discarding the loose, almost shirt-like fullness of past seasons, the new house pajamas are trim, tailored and the trousers are designed on narrower lines.

Shorts Popular In Resort Wear Play Wardrobes

Are Topped by Halters and Knee-Length Coats.

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

IF YOU ARE heading South, play clothes should form a large part of your wardrobe. You will be spending lazy days in the sun and on the beach and this requires clothes that are suitable as well as the last word in smartness. Shorts, both pleated and plain, are foremost in the realm of play clothes topped by halters or mannish tailored shirts with short sleeves. The dressmaker type of bathing suit, made of printed cotton in either dark or bright color combinations, is more popular than ever, accompanied by knee-length coats of self-material in loosely fitted styles. For those who go in for serious swimming, white satin lastex suits trimmed with bright embroidered patterns or brocaded effects are considered the smartest choice.

Play Suits Reappear.

The old play suit is appearing in new interpretations, but the basic idea remains the same—a sun suit which is topped by a skirt so that the costume may be worn elsewhere than the beach. The newest consist of a halter top and shorts, wrap-around skirt (very short), and loosely cut jacket with short sleeves; the entire ensemble made of the same material, preferably Mexican prints in cotton. Slacks are back in the style picture—dark materials accented with white or brilliant sports shirts, or gaily printed halters. The long molded beach coat of last summer, however, is as dead as the dodo as far as fashion dictums are concerned; beach coats or capes now termed chic are cut on loose boxy lines.

Dresses for the boardwalk or to wear to the beach over a bathing suit are usually of the peasant-influence types. The scarf tied about the head peasant-fashion is still being worn a lot, huge beach hats on the cartwheel and sombrero types are considered newer and, incidentally, they are a better choice for those who want to retain pink and white complexions.

Cubits, those high-soled and high-heeled clogs which have been causing such a commotion in the fashion world, have gone into the sports field—a clever acquisition to the cotton or linen play suit. Brief, striped clogs of brilliant colors and backless, toeless ties or sandals, matching the bathing suit or sun costume, also go down to the beach and ocean with smart effect.

Multi-Color Outfits Stylish.

No one color is being sponsored above the rest for 1938, the aim of stylists being to combine several colors in unique themes. Such as cinnamon brown slacks, gold shirt, dusty pink play suit and bright blue skirt; white shorts, black or navy shirt and red rope belt; striped slacks and jacket with bright shirt. Prints are important throughout the play wardrobe—gay prints in bright colors and often primitive-looking patterns. Beach jewelry is much in evidence, especially gold-colored metal Hindu bells (the kind dancers wear on their ankles), made into bracelets, necklaces and anklets by stringing on bright cord.

Watteau Creation Is Latest in Hats

One of the newest ideas in hats for midseason is the Watteau silhouette, a Paris creation. Stylists there also are referring to Renaissance types and tiny shapes, worn tilted on one side of the head in very degage manner. They are trimmed with flowers and veils—the most outstanding trimming of the moment—with great effort made to obtain real flower effects.

Paris is trying to make "becoming hats," with Bretons and flat sailors in numerous interpretations in the new collections. Rose Valois' kettle-edge hats, worn with a long Spanish veil at back, is receiving a lot of favorable comment both here and abroad.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

You Can Get Slim Without Starving by Use of This New Menu.

By Ida Jean Kain.

YOU CAN get slim without going hungry. If you are to stay with your diet, it must stay by you, and the scientific reducing diet provides satiety, bulk and the food essentials. When these dietary principles are observed, reducing is not unbearable.

Although today's Thousand Calorie Menu contains a minimum of calories, it is not lacking in the essential elements of nutrition or in satiety. Moreover, there are enough bulky foods in the menus to appease the appetite.

In the liberal serving of lean meat, eggs and skimmed milk which provide the needed protein, the reducer is assured of foods which stick to the ribs. Lean meat is very low in calories and it helps you to feel well fed. You may be interested to know that a hard-boiled egg is higher in satiety value than one that is soft cooked. Among the fruits, bananas are highest in satiety. To allay that all-gone feeling, which sometimes assails you between your reducing meals, eat a ripe banana.

Vegetables and Fruits.

Vegetables and fruits not only supply the vitamins and minerals so important to your health, they also are valuable as space fillers. You can have a large serving of lettuce, cole slaw, tomatoes, string beans and the like for comparatively few calories.

There must be some fat in the diet, for a menu entirely devoid of fat offers no resistance to hunger pangs. In the reducer's diet fat should be in the form of cream and butter, which supply vitamin A. This is the vitamin which increases your resistance to colds. If you are susceptible to colds, it would be advisable for you to take one vitamin A capsule daily. One capsule of haliver or codliver oil affords protection and contains a negligible number of calories.

Following the three days on the fruit regime, there is less space to fill in the tummy. It is not always the size of the meal, it may be the space you have to fill that determines the amount of food which satisfies you. The tummy actually shrinks during the regime, and the 1,000-calorie menus can seem almost as ample as your usual fare.

Juggling the Calories.

In these 1,000-calorie menus, I have juggled the calories to include the essential food elements—and plenty of food. If you leave out certain foods, such as skimmed milk, eggs, or the fruits and vegetables, the menus cease to be properly balanced, and while you may continue to lose weight you will pay for it by loss of vitality!

The use of these menus for the remainder of the week will assure a loss of from three to five pounds during the first week of your reducing program. Next week the calorie allowance should be adjusted to your individual needs, with the day's total ranging from 1,000 to 1,600 calories.

Many Society Notables Soon to Leave for South

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

While Capital society continues its regular seasonal whirl, a number of notables are planning trips to the South, either for short visits or for the remainder of the season. From "winter capitals" in Florida, Georgia and South Carolina comes word that by the end of the month many Washingtonians will be enjoying the sunshine away from home.

HOPE R. MILLER.

The Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt will leave around January 20 for a sojourn in Florida, dividing their time between Miami Beach and Palm Beach. Before departing, however, they will finish a round of entertaining for the Helsinki University Chorus, scheduled to be in Washington the middle of the month.

Dr. and Mrs. John Oliver La Gorce will be off tomorrow for Miami Beach to spend the remainder of the season.

From Aiken, S. C., comes a dispatch to the effect that Mrs. James F. Curtis is expected to be there some time this month, and that she will be in residence there for the season. Mrs. Curtis' home on Hayne avenue is one of the most interesting places in Aiken and has been the scene of many brilliant affairs.

Mrs. Curtis' son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George H. (Pete) Bostwick, of New York, are also expected to be there during the week when the Aiken Polo team makes arrangements for its winter engagements. William Post, of New York, another prominent member of the team, has already arrived in Aiken.

On the resort's social calendar for January is the Drag Hunt, which will be run the middle of the month. This affair, one of the biggest social events of the year, will be preceded by a number of hunt breakfasts, drawing guests from all over the East. The social season in Aiken will officially open with a concert, featuring Nino Martini, January 19, when box-holders will include some of the Nation's outstanding celebrities.

Speaking of Aiken—a number of Washington residents, who spent the holiday season there, recently returned. Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Delano were guests of Arthur Young, of New York. Mr. Delano, an uncle of President Roosevelt, and his wife returned to the Capital for the ball at the White House last week. Senator and Mrs. James F. Byrnes, who also vacationed there, came back for the opening of Congress on Monday.

Mrs. Sol Bloom and Daughter 'at Home'

Meanwhile, Washington's social calendar is full speed ahead, with teas, dinners and dances setting a new high in numbers. "At homes," however, are holding their own as society's favorite, and most frequent, diversion.

Informality, good company and delicious dainties served up with a cup of tea yesterday afternoon marked the first "at home" of Mrs. Sol Bloom and her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, this season. Guests gathered in the spacious drawing room of the Bloom home on Columbia road. Look in any direction you please in that house and your eye will fall on some rare object of art, some lovely Italian piece of furniture, antique plaques that Mrs. Bloom has made herself, or exquisitely framed, inscribed photographs of notables.

Presiding at a tea table, which was covered with a handsome hand-drawn lace cloth, Mrs. Bloom wore a trim black frock with rhinestone trimming. Miss Bloom had chosen a sea-green crepe dress, street-length and cut on simple lines.

During the latter half of the party, Representative Bloom arrived, having just finished his day's work on "the Hill," and in no time at all he and Mrs. McCook Knox, chairman of the Sesquicentennial Art Exhibition, were discussing some interesting phases of the display. Presently, guests all around the room were mentioning which picture they considered the best in the exhibit.

Diplomatic Corps Well Represented

Among the guests were Miss Yoeh Wang, daughter of the Chinese Ambassador; the Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky, Donna de Suvich, wife of the Italian Ambassador; the Bulgarian Minister and Mme. Naoumoff; the Minister of Guatemala, Dr. Adrian Recinos, Baron Hans von Dreyhausen, formerly a member of the Diplomatic Corps, but now living in New York, and Mme. Boncesco, wife of the Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation.

Also, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Houghteling who had with them Mrs. Thomas Harlan Ellett, of New York, who has been visiting here through the holidays; Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Clarence Hewes, Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Mrs. Truxton Beale, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. Hugh Barbour Hutchinson, Gilbert Hutchinson and Miss Elizabeth Buell—to mention but a few of the many attending one of the most pleasant "at homes" thus far this season.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

"GOT ANY more books in mind?" we asked Mrs. Ellis (Grace Zaring) Stone yesterday.

"Authors always have another book in mind," she replied, but refused to be more definite. However, the author, who in only eight years turned out five novels and a number of short stories, may be considered as likely to produce some more fiction before very long.

Mrs. Stone is here for a week as the guest of Commander and Mrs. John H. Magruder, jr., who entertained at a cocktail party for her yesterday. On leaving Washington, Mrs. Stone will join Commander Stone, en route to his new post in California. Her charming home in Georgetown is occupied by the James Bonbrights, of the State Department.

Since leaving Washington a year or so ago, Mrs. Stone has been traveling around Europe "just for fun." The scene of her best known book, "The Bitter Tea of General Yen," is laid in China, where she lived with her husband for a number of years. She first started her career in the West Indies, because there, she said, "I had plenty of time, plenty of servants and plenty of things to write about." Mrs. Stone is pretty and chic, and does not look old enough to have a married daughter.

Miss Speaks Entertained By Ohioans

Gives Recital Tonight at Roosevelt High School Here.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Members of the Ohio State Society yesterday paid honor to Miss Margaret Speaks, radio singer and one of the State's distinguished daughters, who will give a recital at Roosevelt High School tonight.

Miss Speaks is the daughter of former Representative John Speaks, of Ohio, and niece of Oley Speaks, the composer. A reception was given for her in the Queen Elizabeth room of the Raleigh Hotel, with Col. C. C. Schiffeler, manager of the hotel, and Mrs. Schiffeler, formerly of Columbus, and officers of the society as hosts.

Miss Speaks found herself among old friends when she arrived in Washington. Col. Schiffeler sponsored the recital in which she made her debut 12 years ago at his hotel in Columbus, and Mrs. Schiffeler is a sorority sister in Kappa Kappa Gamma. Miss Speaks and Col. Schiffeler sang on the same programs at the radio station at Ohio State College while she was a student there.

Last night she was entertained at the home of Col. and Mrs. Jeter Horton, who asked officers of the State society and members of the recital committee there to meet her.

In Receiving Line.

In the receiving line at the reception were Senator and Mrs. Robert J. Bulkley, Senator and Mrs. Vic Donahey, Judge Ernest H. Van Fossan, chairman of the governing board of the Ohio State Society, and Miss Grace Burton, who was hostess for Theodore Burton, her uncle, when he was in the Senate.

Many other prominent Ohioans were present. Mrs. Wade H. Ellis poured, as did Mrs. Strickland Gillilan, wife of the humorist; Mrs. Robert Freer, Mrs. W. B. Pntman, whose husband is president of the Ohio State Alumni Association; Mrs. James Shera Montgomery, Mrs. Frank Willis, widow of Senator Willis; Mrs. Morris Ervin and Miss Irene Neikirk, secretary of the society. A poinsettia decorated the center of the tea table on which there was a silver service.

Mrs. R. A. Rothballer, president of the Alumnae Chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma, and several other members also greeted Miss Speaks, coming from a card party held by the sorority. Mrs. Wade Ellis was accompanied by Mr. Ellis and her sister, Miss Luella Chase, regent of Susan Reviere Hetzel Chapter of the D. A. R. and president of the State Regent Club. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis came here from Cincinnati more than 25 years ago. He is former attorney general of Ohio.

Mrs. Gillilan was accompanied by Mr. Gillilan, who was surrounded as soon as he arrived by a group of friends, whom he entertained with his flow of amusing comment. He was the State society's speaker at its last meeting.

Mrs. Horton Present.

Mrs. Horton, who is a musician and music patron, was there with Mrs. Thomas Burke, also a patron of tonight's recital. The latter, although a member of the recent flying caravan of the People's Mandate Committee, and active in the social life of Washington, still has time for her music, to which she devoted herself professionally before her marriage. She was known to the concert world as Ana del Pulgar, pianist.

Miss Marion Donahey also was a guest, wearing a chic black velvet frock and a quaint black velvet hat, the high crown of which was trimmed with narrow bands of red and green.

Among others were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Owsley and their guests, Mrs. Field, of Denver; Arnold L. Lovejoy, who is managing tonight's concert for the Community Center; Representative and Mrs. Dow Harter, of Ohio; Mrs. Helen Fetter Cook, Mrs. A. A. Dibble, Mrs. Constance Snow, Mr. and Mrs. Justin Macklin and their daughter; Mrs. Joseph Robichaux, one of the Capital's gifted sopranos, and Mrs. J. J. Staley, whose son received his appointment to Annapolis through Miss Speaks' father.

IT'S INTERESTING to watch for the magazines of the national women's organizations as they come along, month by month, offering material which appeals not only to their own groups but to both men and women who follow women's part in the progress of the country.

The January issue of "The Clubwoman," published by the General Federation of Women's Clubs with Miss Vella Winner as its able editor, devotes a double-page spread to a diagram of the highway safety program for States sponsored by the general federation and 11 other organizations—the American Automobile Association, American Legion, Automotive Safety Foundation, Harvard Bureau for Street Traffic Research, Highway Education Board, International Association of Chiefs of Police, National Automobile Dealers Association, National Congress of Parents and Teachers, National Grange, National Safety Council and Northwestern University Safety Institute.

* * * *

It's right in the middle of the magazine where it strikes the eye first thing, when the book is opened. It deals with public support for the safety program, authority for it, and the program itself, including legislation, motor vehicle administration, enforcement, engineering, education, training personnel and research.

THE GENERAL federation's interest in the approaching meeting of the executive board, here next week, preparatory to the triennial convention in Kansas City in May, is mirrored in the issue which carries pictures of the various candidates for national offices, and scenes in Kansas City with a story on convention plans by Mrs. David S. Long, chairman of local arrangements.

THE DEMOCRATIC DIGEST, another ably edited magazine, with Helen Essary at its head and Virginia Rishel as associate editor, carries a story on "Twentieth Century Minervas" by Miss Rishel. Among them is Nina Kinsella, authority on penology, who is also president of the Washington Business and Professional Women's Club.

Others whose pictures appear are Annette Abbott Adams, assistant special counsel for the United States; Stella Akin, who is listed as "a legal star in the Department of Justice," and Bern Berard, "a top-flight executive in the department."

Court Decision Spurs Federal Power Program

PWA Will Make Effort to Start Projects by Spring.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes, the Public Works Administrator, said yesterday the Government would make an effort to get its public power development program under way by early spring.

His announcement followed a statement by Attorney General Cummings that the Department of Justice would act immediately to obtain dissolution of injunctions which have tied up PWA projects in 23 States.

Cummings said there were 61 cases pending throughout the country which would be controlled by Monday's Supreme Court decision clearing the way for operation of the Government's program. The high tribunal decided that the Alabama and Duke power companies had no legal right to challenge the validity of PWA loans and grants to local governmental subdivisions.

Unofficially, it was estimated at the Justice Department that injunctions had been issued in 47 of the 61 cases. Forty-nine were filed in the Federal District Court of the District of Columbia, eight in other District courts, and four in State courts.

PWA officials said that once the power construction program starts it will create more than 100,000,000 man hours of employment. They said the program in the 23 States would cost $146,917,808. Of this amount, PWA has already allotted $61,225,544 in loans and $38,412,408 in grants. The localities will provide the balance.

Contract

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Technique.

Certain plays defy classification, thus coming under the expert's general description of "sound technique." In the hand shown below the declarer (one of this country's leading masters) had not decided exactly how to play his slam contract until most of the cards had been played. But, due to the fact that he had, as a matter of habit, taken certain precautions, he was able to swing over to a line of attack that proved successful.

South, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

North: ♠ A 7 5 ♡ 8 6 ◇ Q 10 9 3 2 ♣ 6 4 3
West: ♠ K J 10 9 3 ♡ J 7 4 ◇ 8 5 ♣ K 10 2
East: ♠ Q 8 6 4 2 ♡ K 9 5 3 ◇ 7 ♣ J 9 8
South: ♠ — ♡ A Q 10 2 ◇ A K J 8 4 ♣ A Q 7 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	1 ♠	2 ◇	2 ♠
3 ♠	Pass	3 N T	4 ♠
5 ♣	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
6 ◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

West, despite declarer's cue-bid in spades, could find no better opening than the Jack of spades. Dummy's Ace won, declarer discarding a low club and, without any clear idea of what would eventuate, declarer ruffed a spade as a possible preparation for a strip-and-throw-in. He led the diamond Jack and overtook with the Queen, then ruffed dummy's spade with a diamond honor. A low trump to the nine cleaned up opponents' trumps, and then a heart was led to the Queen. When it held, the Ace and deuce of hearts followed. West could have made a very shrewd play by throwing his heart Jack on the Ace. When he didn't, declarer suddenly found himself with a grand opportunity. He allowed the heart Jack to hold the trick, discarding a club from the dummy. The defenders were then in a horrible position. East could not overtake the heart Jack without establishing declarer's heart ten. Had he done so and returned a club, declarer would have played the Ace and discarded dummy's last club on the established heart ten.

West's winning the trick with the heart Jack was equally satisfactory to the declarer. West either had to return a club directly up to declarer's tenace, or a spade that would permit a club discard from dummy while declarer was ruffing with his last trump.

Obviously, had West put his heart Jack on declarer's Ace, the contract would have been defeated, since East then would have been on lead if declarer passed the trick. But this would require considerable imagination on West's part. Declarer deserved success for his own ingenuity.

This question, of interest to every smoker, is answered by the men who know tobacco from the ground up

IF YOU want to know the quality of the tobaccos that go into various cigarettes, here is one certain source of information — the men who grow tobacco.

They sell each lot of their leaf to the buyer who bids most for it. They have seen Camel bid and pay them those higher prices necessary to get their choice piles of leaf. And, being well-posted, they report that other planters who grow fine tobacco have had the same experience. That's why, as one grower puts it: "Most planters prefer Camels."

Camels are the largest-selling cigarette in America. Choose Camels. Smoke them steadily, and you'll realize what finer, more expensive tobaccos mean in smoking.

"COSTLIER TOBACCOS," says Edward Estes, capable young planter, "I know that's right. Camel paid the highest price to get the best lots of my last crop. That's true for most other planters. Camels are my cigarette."

"CAMELS ARE MADE FROM more expensive tobaccos," says planter Beckham Wright. "I know the kind of leaf used for making various cigarettes. Camel uses the choice leaf. My best lots are bought for Camel."

"I HAD THE DANDIEST tobacco crop ever," says Roy Jones, well-known tobacco grower. "The Camel people paid the biggest price to get the best lots. So I know they use costlier tobaccos for Camels, and I smoke 'em."

"I HAD A FINE TOBACCO crop last year—my best yet," says George M. Crumbaugh. "Camels bought all the choice lots—paid more than I ever got before, too."

MEET ALEY SKIDMORE, of Winchester, Kentucky. "I'm a tobacco planter," he says as he displays some of his choice leaf. "Those Camel buyers pay for the best—and get it. Camel took all of the fine leaf that I had. I'm a steady Camel smoker myself. Camels are the favorite with men who grow tobacco." Mr. Skidmore and the other planters shown here bring direct evidence that Camels are indeed made from costlier tobaccos. Turn to Camels and see for yourself that those costlier tobaccos do make a real difference.

WALTER DEVINE'S TOBACCO brought the highest price in his market. "Camels took the choice lots on our market," he says. "They usually do. I know tobacco, so I smoke Camels."

TOP PRICES, that's what J. B. Jackson got. "Camel buyers pay more to get the best tobacco. That means finer tobacco for Camels. I say cigarette quality has got to be grown in the leaf. That's why I smoke Camels."

"I'VE GROWN OVER 87,000 pounds in the past five years," says Cecil White, experienced planter. "The top grades went to Camels at best prices. They almost always do. Like most planters, I smoke Camels."

"THE CAMEL PEOPLE bought the best of my last crop," says T. N. Williams, tobacco planter. "They paid the highest price. More expensive tobacco goes into Camel cigarettes all right."

"AN EXTRA GOOD CROP," says Ray Sponcil, who has grown fine tobacco for many years, "and the Camel buyer bought all of my 'specially good baskets of leaf. I've seen the real fine lots go to the Camel people year after year. I smoke Camels because I know the quality of the tobacco they use."

"I'VE BEEN IN this county for 30 years," says tobacco planter Ollie Hazelwood. "I'll tell you where the best tobacco goes. The choice lots of my crop are almost always bought by the Camel people. Every one on our place smokes Camels too."

"MY FOUR BROTHERS AND I have been plantin' tobacco for 21 years," says John Wallace, Jr. "Camels paid top prices. I've been smoking Camels for 17-18 years. I know what's in 'em."

"BEEN RAISING TOBACCO for twenty-five years so I know that Camel pays more to get our better tobaccos," says Vertner Hatton, tobacco planter. "I smoke Camels."

Not all the foreign diplomats live in embassies and legations. . . . Aside from the top men and their men Fridays (usually bachelors) most of them scatter through Washington's more fashionable neighborhoods in unobtrusive houses and apartments, next door to prosperous grocers, insurance men and people like you and me.

* * * *

For example, the German military and air attache, Lieut. Gen. Friedrich von Boetticher, who keeps tab on our land and air forces for Herr Hitler, lives in a neat brownstone and red brick at 3203 R street, on the edge of old Georgetown.

It has a tiny garden, a two-car garage and a fanlight over the door. . . . For the 9 rooms and tower, in this chastely aristocratic neighborhood, the general probably pays about $225 a month rent.

* * * *

Not so far away lives the German naval attache, Rear Admiral Robert Witthoeft-Emden, at 1700 Surrey lane, in Foxhall Village, a house as hard to find as was the German fleet during the war. . . .

It's the fanciest corner in a long row of semidetached houses, revels in a bear rug and faint traces of Teutonic architecture.

Many small children ride by on tricycles past the 7 steps leading to the tiny front yard. The timbered stone house is smack against its neighbors, and the admiral probably pays around $200 a month.

"—pretty Frau & baby-carriage."

A bit better housed than most attaches is Bueno do Prado, first secretary and charge d'affaires for the Brazilians, in a 4-story brick house at 1818 Twenty-fourth street, in the diplomatic sector.

White jacketed servants flutter in and out the front door, and guests run the front wheels of their cars up on the curb. It is ornate with ironwork, a bay window and recessed urns, probably has 15 or 20 rooms, and must rent for around $300 a month.

* * * *

Out in the bourgeois paradise of Garfield street, at No. 3512, dwells Military Engineer (First Rank) Vladimir Mikhailovich Begunov, the Russian military attache . . . It is a square, rough stucco, dark and a little shaggy. It's opposite the Cathedral grounds, near the tennis courts, and next door the neighborhood tots clamber on a jungle gym, no doubt a softening touch for the dour Bolsheviks, who love children, too. Rent's probably around $150.

* * * *

Next door to a private school for tots lives Commander A. L. P. Mark-Wardlaw, assistant naval attache for the British, at 3225 Highland place. It's imposing from the front, with an awesome semicircular portico, but quite modest from the side; around 8 rooms, with a galvanized iron detached garage, in a quiet mellow neighborhood, and probably rents for around $135 a month, with the yells and laughter of 65 tots thrown in free.

* * * *

Sumptuously housed is Capt. don Umberto Cugia Marquis of Sant, Orsola, naval attache and honorary aide de camp to the King of Italy, in a largish brick and timbered stucco mansion at 4447 Hawthorne street, out in Justice Black's comfortable and rather new neighborhood. It's a corner house, with a large front yard; well shrubbed and with a huge fireplace; might be the home of a prosperous lawyer. The rent must be at least $275.

"—tots beguile the Bolsheviks."

Not very far from the USSR's naval attache live the German Embassy's first secretary, Herr Herbert Scholz and his luscious Frau, in a sort of honeymoon cottage on the corner, at 3203 Cleveland avenue. Frau Scholz can be seen on sunny days hovering over the baby's buggy on the upper porch. The German yardman is a little nervous when people stop to gaze at the house. There is a police call box at the curb. It's an 8-room house, at the intersection of five streets, with a triangular front yard, and the rent's probably around $150.

* * * *

In what would be called a "fine old house" in Georgetown lives B. Kleijn Molekamp, commercial counselor for the Netherlands Legation, at 3416 P street, not far from the Jimmy Roosevelts. . . . It's brick, painted yellow, next to a row of red flats with bay windows. There are abandoned car tracks in the narrow street, and not far away are the shops of Wisconsin avenue. The rent would be around $150.

Most of the Jap attaches live in apartments, several having moved to apartments lately from houses. There are about 250 such diplomatic families scattered through Washington's residential districts, and they give Washington a bit of that international flavor which distinguishes the town.

Strict Control Urged Here to Help Traffic

Police, Courts to Join in Stricter Law Enforcement.

Stringent methods to combat Washington's 1938 traffic problem were porposed yesterday as safety suggestions from readers of The Washington Post were studied during a five-hour conference in the office of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent.

Each response to The Post-Metropolitan Police call for traffic improvement suggestions was read aloud. From among several hundred letters, 19 citizen proposals were selected for further consideration at 11 a. m. today by Maj. Brown, Commissioners Hazen and Sultan, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and five members of the police high command.

Tomorrow's Post will announce winners and awards.

"Out of these constructive suggestions," said Maj. Brown, "we hope to formulate a definite highway safety program for Washington. Many proposals submitted show careful thought and will aid us materially in plans for the future."

For the benefit of police district inspectors who attended yesterday's conference, Maj. Brown outlined plans to use the department's mobile equipment—motorcycles and patrol cars—to better advantage by concentrating on principal thoroughfares throughout the city. An enforcement program is being considered, he said, whereby an augmented mounted force will be assigned to these streets.

Under the chief's proposal, motor patrols will appear without warning on certain streets, remain there several days and then transfer activities to another section. They will return to the original street and repeat this procedure in a continuing drive against speed and reckless driving.

Plans to increase speed limits in the District were again discussed. Both Brown and Van Duzer agreed the antiquated 22-mile speed limit should be abolished. They suggested a boost to 25 and 35 miles per hour, followed by strict enforcement.

Inspectors L. I. H. Edwards and James Beckett objected to the 35-mile limit, advocating nothing above 30. Although no action was taken, it is believed that a higher limit will be recommended to the Commissioners. Police court judges will be asked to aid rigid enforcement efforts.

In an effort to solve Washington's parking problem, the conference brought suggestions to either abolish all downtown parking or make it unlimited. Brown pointed out that he would be able to use more men in the enforcement of major regulations if the task of checking parking violations was eliminated.

Twenty-five members of the police department are now being shifted to motorcycle duty. With an increased motor force, Brown said he anticipated a drop in serious accidents and law infractions.

Others attending yesterday's meeting included Inspectors William E. Holmes, B. A. Lamb and Edward J. Kelly.

Threatening to fine a woman physician for contempt of court, Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran yesterday warned District motorists to obey regulations or face rigid penalties.

Accused of passing a red signal light at Connecticut avenue and Tilden street northwest, Dr. Edith S. Coale, resident physician of the Hay-Adams House, was fined $10.

After explaining she "had not intended" to pass the light, Dr. Coale inquired if the judge "was still going to fine her?"

"The court dislikes to fine anyone," said Judge Curran, "but it is necessary. Step back."

Dr. Coale turned and muttered something under her breath. Judge Curran leaned from his bench and said:

"Young lady, come back here. I will not tolerate any exhibition of this character in my court. If there are any further exhibitions of this sort, I will hold you in contempt. Go over and sit down."

During a lecture to another motorist, Judge Curran declared:

"The record of fatalities last year is sufficient to convince officials of this jurisdiction that something must be done.

Citizens' Group Against Raise In Speed Limit

Cleveland Park Association Urges Extension of Parking Ban.

The District Commissioners will be asked to disapprove a proposed increase in the speed limit on city traffic by the Cleveland Park Citizens Association, the association resolved at a meeting last night.

The resolution, upholding present speed laws, was one of three adopted by the association affecting traffic.

In a second action the association urged the extension of a ban on parking on a year-around basis on streets on certain main thoroughfares throughout the city.

The proposal of the Bureau of the Budget to divert a portion of the gasoline tax fund to pay expenses of street lighting was hit in another resolution.

The association appointed a committee to study the possibility of converting two small sections of land on Reno road into parks. The property, it was pointed out, is too small for building purposes.

An investigation of conditions at Gallinger Hospital was demanded last night by the Columbia Heights Citizens Association as the result of the case of Thomas P. Gallagher, whose brain concussion condition was described as "drunkenness" at the institution several nights ago.

Gallagher, who had been held up, slugged, robbed and spent 17 hours in a cell, is in serious condition.

The association also went on record as opposing the conversion of the old Tuberculosis Hospital into a convalescent annex. Citizens said they wanted the buildings used as a recreational or educational center.

Children who reside outside the District should be compelled to pay tuition if they attend District schools, the association voted.

Supervision of school playgrounds by the Board of Education was urged in a resolution adopted by the Southeast Citizens Association.

Another resolution concerning use of the old Tuberculosis Hospital on Upshur street as a convalescent ward for Gallinger Hospital was referred to the association secretary, Dr. Homer K. Butler.

The following committee chairmen were appointed:

Streets, W. J. Carey; education, Mrs. Morgan Otterback; sanitation, Dr. Homer K. Butler; parks, John V. Schmitt; utilities, George C. Glick; law and legislation, Louis F. Frick; fire and police, Joseph P. Costantino; Navy Yard, John Lane; employment, Mrs. M. O. Kennedy; membership, Mrs. Alyse Thume; Southeast Community Center, B. G. Ladd; entertainment, Mrs. A. M. Minnix; civic atairs, Vernis Absher; delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations, Orrin Davey and Vernis Absher, and delegates to the Southeast Council, Davey, Absher and William Maio.

Marriage License Health Test Asked

A proposed marriage law which would require all applicants for marriage licenses in Washington to submit physicians' certificates that they were free of spyhlis or gonorhea in order to obtain a license was approved yesterday by the subcommittee on communicable diseases of the health committee of the Board of Trade, at a meeting yesterday at the Harrington Hotel.

This proposal will be submitted tomorrow to the health committee. Charles S. Zurhorst is chairman of the subcommittee on communicable diseases.

D.C. Historians Pay Tribute to Charles Glover

The memory of Charles Carroll Glover, "father of Rock Creek Park and Potomac Park," and former president of the Riggs National Bank, was honored last night by more than 100 members of the Columbia Historical Society at a meeting at the Mayflower Hotel.

Glover, once termed by Theodore Roosevelt the ideal citizen, was a life-long member of the society and active in the organization's work until his death, February 25, 1936. Often called Washington's greatest single benefactor, he conceived plans for the Washington Cathedral and was instrumental in choosing the site for the Lincoln Memorial.

Allen C. Clark, president of the Society, reviewed Glover's life and accomplishments in the opening address last night and introduced Newbold Noyes, editor of the Washington Evening Star, who described Glover as "a dreamer but intensely practical and a person of unusual ability."

Other persons present who spoke of their associations with Glover and praised his memory included G. O. Vass, A. M. Nevious and Sidney Toliafreoo, all vice presidents of the Riggs National Bank; J. Evans, vice president of the Hamilton National Bank; Burr Johnson, also of the Riggs Bank and associated with Glover for 46 years, and Everett H. Tucker, president of the Northeast Citizens Association.

Charles Carroll Glover, jr., was also present and expressed appreciation to the society members for their remembrance of his father.

During the regular business session of the meeting, 74 new members were elected into the organization and the entire staff of officers were re-elected. Officers reinstated were President Clark, vice presidents, Maj. Gist Blair and V. B. Deyher; treasurer, Maud Burr Morris, and chronicler, John Clagett Procter.

Members of the board of managers, also re-elected, were Robert V. Fleming, Robert E. Mattingly, Theodore W. Noyes and W. B. Bryan.

Collins Reiterates Displeasure Over Carfare Increase

Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District Appropriations, said he was still displeased with the recent increase in token fares despite explanations by members of the Public Utilities Commission.

"About one more such raise in rates and there won't be any street car riders," he said.

The token fare order occupied much of the hearing on commission estimates, it is understood, and members of the commission gave as good as they got in defense of the fare increase.

Rushing along on the District budget, which will be submitted formally to Congress today, the sub-committee was ready to tackle health department estimates, among others, when it resumes the hearing today.

5,000 Realty Accounts Due To Be Settled

Estimate Made With Sale of Delinquents' Holdings Set Next Week.

More than 5,000 realty tax accounts of the 25,000 advertised by the tax assessor's office as delinquent probably will be paid before the annual tax deed sale is begun next Tuesday, it was estimated yesterday. The sale will be continued for ten days.

Meanwhile, the tax assessor's office announced assessments on real estate for 1938 had been tentatively completed, and said the board would hear all complaints until and including the first Monday in June, 1938. After this date, no complaints will be received.

Property owners were warned to inspect the new assessments in order that they might be advised of any change in the valuation of their property.

It was explained that many of the delinquent accounts subject to the tax deed sale were made up of more than one piece of property.

Under the law is a clause which requires the District or brokers to bid in the delinquent tax property during the tax deed sale. The owner may redeem his property during the two years after the sale on payment of the taxes and added penalties.

'Jockey' and $200 Sought by Players Of 'Sure Winners'

The manager of a swanky apartment house in the Connecticut avenue district, her two switchboard operators and several tenants, paid out some $200 yesterday on a sure thing. Last night they were wondering if they hadn't bought a lot of the stuff dreams are made of.

A lithe little fellow who looked just like a jockey walked into the place yesterday and said he wanted to rent an apartment, beginning next month. He didn't look at the apartment, but produced a batch of clippings which indicated he was a jockey of some prominence. He wrote out a $50 check for the first month's rent.

On top of that he said he was on his way to Tropical Park, Fla., to ride a couple of horses that were rigged as winners. He was going to back the setup with his own dough. So you can't blame the house manager for putting up $20 of her own, or the two switchboard girls for coming across with $10 apiece, or several tenants who were tipped off by the manager to raising the ante to $200.

Where is the jockey now? That's what his investors would like to know, especially since the check bounced.

Hair Dressers Told New Mode Is '1900 Again'

The back of the head and how to make the most of it came in for considerable discussion last night at the Willard Hotel, where Washington beauty operators met to discuss the trend in hair styles.

The fashion in milady's coiffure this spring will be "1900 all over again, but streamlined," according to the technicians present.

Set of Neck Important.

Hair will come up off the neck, but will be trained to wave into places without benefit of the back comb your mamma wore. The topknot that was a hard wound-around ball when Aunt Sally wore it—for reference, see the family album—this year becomes a brushed-up cascade of short soft curls.

The set of the neck thereby becomes important and the worry of "widow locks" comes back to vex the feminine.

The front of the new hair-do just about takes care of itself. For the most part it will be up and away from the forehead, but a few bangs will be worn.

Tinting to Be Made.

To replace the toll taken by present-day civilization—which is just as much of a strain on the hair as it is on the nerves—reconditioning shampoos that tint as they go will come into use, the beauty operators were told.

Personality tints are important, Maude Armstrong said. "There's a tint for everyone, just as there's a lipstick shade for everyone," she said. Any tint used should be to enhance the natural color and to add highlights to the tresses, she declared.

Emilie Yven, French stylist, said curls will be fewer, larger and softer. Tight little curls are out of the picture and railroad waves are overboard, he assured his listeners.

Ex-Felon Cleared In Name Change to Erase Jail Stigma

A former convict retained his freedom yesterday when he convinced Police Court Judge Walter J. Casey that the stigma of a prison term had forced him to change his name to obtain a hacker's license.

The former convict was charged with obtaining a taxicab driver's license under false representation. His real name was made known when a former cellmate identified his picture in the hack inspector's office.

In 1926, the man told the judge, he was convicted of stealing an automobile and transporting it across a State line. He served two years in the Atlanta Penitentiary.

After release he came to Washington where he obtained a job driving a cab. He changed his name, married and two children were born.

13,000 Jobless Seek Benefits At Office Here

Job Board Leader Predicts Dozens Must Be Turned Away.

Applications for payments under the District unemployment compensation act rose to 13,000 yesterday as a steady stream of jobless filed into the temporary employment center offices, 928 Fifth street northwest.

"This figure probably comes very close to the total number of applications we will receive," John Marshall, director of the District Unemployment Compensation Board, said last night.

The great majority of the 13,000, Marshall explained, have merely made appointments for presentation of their claims, but more than 2,000 have actually filed their statements in personal interviews with members of the board staff.

21 Months Is Limit.

Under provisions of the District unemployment compensation law, no person who has been out of work more than 21 months is eligible for benefit payments, since the act requires that the applicant shall have been employed for at least 13 weeks in the year immediately preceding loss of work. Payments by employers into the unemployment insurance fund did not begin until January 1, 1936.

Dozens of applications for benefits will immediately be thrown out, Marshall indicated, because the individual has been continuously unemployed for more than 21 months and has therefore had no opportunity to pile up to his credit in the fund a percentage of his salary, paid by the employer.

Other applicants whom the board must turn away are unemployed domestic servants, a classification not included in the provisions of the act, and jobless in other categories whose individual employers were not covered in the fund.

Majority Know Plan.

Although the board's Fifth street headquarters are thus destined to be the scene of disappointment for hundreds, the majority of applicants, according to Marshall, show sound comprehension of the compensation plan.

Registration has proceeded in an orderly and businesslike fashion, he said, and a staff of 40 interviewers has in two days handled the 13,000 individual cases without confusion.

Attributing this result partly to careful attention given the benefit scheme in numerous trade union meetings, Marshall declared, "A thorough program of education has been carried out since the act first went into effect."

Police Report Bootleg Ring Broken Here

300-Gallon Still Seized in Upper Sixteenth Street District.

Man and Youth Held as Woman, 2 Children Escape.

Police said last night a bootleg ring which moved here from Baltimore was smashed as District police and Federal agents made the largest illegal liquor seizure since repeal in the fashionable Sixteenth street district.

Two stills, one of 300-gallon a day capacity, were destroyed and a man and a boy were arrested. Police said they are on the trail of other members of the gang selling the liquor in District alleys.

Arrested were Nazzeraino Magnaterra, 38, Baltimore, and a 16-year-old youth. Both were in police stations last night charged with violation of the liquor tax act.

Three Escape.

Seized also were 400 gallons of liquor; 1,350 gallons of mash in 60-gallon vats; 1,000 pounds of sugar and yeast cakes; 60 gallons of molasses; 60 empty 5-gallon tins and a 1935 Ford coach.

The raid was made in the 1600 block of Madison street northwest, an 18-room house overlooking Rock Creek Park. A woman and two children occupying the house with Magnaterra escaped.

The raid was the result of a long investigation. Last October the police vice squad made the previous largest illicit liquor raid and arrested two men and a woman. Investigations following these arrests led to the arrests last night.

Youth Seized.

Earlier in the day, John T. Fisher, of the Alcohol Tax Unit, arrested the youth in an automobile at Ninth and Underwood streets northwest.

Last night police waited at the house and after the women left, officers led by Frank J. Sweeney, of the Alcohol Tax Unit, and Sergt. George C. Deyoe, of the vice squad, entered and captured Magnaterra.

The two huge stills with the mash and supplies were found on the large third floor. They wrecked the stills and confiscated the liquor.

The raid came as a surprise to neighbors, who said people living in the house had been very quiet. They had moved in late last July. But suspicions of neighbors had not been aroused by seeing a small, dark coach make frequent trips to and from the house at night. Recently a small green Ford, found in the basement filled with empty cans, was noticed also. Faint smells of mash they attributed to wine.

Youth Arraigned.

The youth yesterday was arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage and was held when he could not furnish bond.

Police said that the liquor was being sold in alleys for about $8 a 5-gallon tin. The still was capable of manufacturing enough liquor to bring in well over $100,000 a year, police estimated.

Nine Beauties On Program at D.C. Night Spot

By Chanticleer.

The Bamboo Gardens, that popular night spot at Fourteenth and H, is extending to patrons this week a real entertainment bonus. The nine continental beauties who provided glamour at one of the local theaters a few weeks back are scheduled. Mary Jane Brown is back with her tap routine. The Carrols feature acrobatic drunks. Held over, are the clever interpretations of famous people by marionettes under the skillful direction of Bob Flinch. New specialties are Audrey Hayes, the Doray sisters and Lenora Thall, the girl from Hollywood whom you will remember from "The Great Waltz." Mary Martin, the popular songstress, and Russ Cullen and his boys provide smooth dancing music.

The Ambassador's Hi-Hat cocktail lounge continues to be a popular rendezvous for Washingtonians seeking entertainment after dark. Helen Malcolm and the Three Merry Makers share the spotlight and furnish delightful entertainment.

On visiting the Madrillon we discovered Johnny Robb, the trumpeter in the band, singing one of the latest song hits and noted that Johnny Shaw and his boys do not wear soup and fish on Sunday evenings. Good music and gay fun at this Spanish resort.

At the Shoreham the Big International Variety Show is being held over in the blue room this week.

This means that those who missed the Shoreham party New Year's Eve will have the opportunity to come for dinner this week, any night, and with no extra charge, see the hit show that entertained the blue room guests on New Year's Eve at $10 per person. The Prince Mogul, the mystic, who knows all promises to tell all at the special entertainment feature in the cocktail lounge.

The International Variety Show in the blue room features those sensational comics discovered a short time ago by Rudy Vallee and presented here under his name, Mirth and Mack; also those four beautiful McNallie sisters; the Myran Pearl company, who entertained for the King and Queen of England a short time ago; Leon Lenidoff, the singer, with the Russian and American repertoire, and last, but not least—many like them best of all—the steeplechase with Arsene Gautier. An act with the real live ponies and dogs, and monkeys provide entertainment that the whole family will love. (Gautier, by the way, remains only through tonight's entertainment.) Then there is Maxim Lowe's music with Barnee directing.

If you are in the mood for the spectacular, then turn to Brinkley's down in Southeast, for they are continuing their special attraction of Will Lacy, the bicycle rider. With complete disregard for laws of space and gravity, this daring artist is holding spectators breathless with seemingly impossible feats, a good act that deserves generous applause and a return engagement. During the dinner hour, and later for dancing, Jimmy Bright and his boys furnish pleasant music.

Pall Mall patrons, who have been wondering what they were going to do for dance music now that Sonny Kendis has left for the Big City, were pleasantly surprised last night. The new Pall Mall continental orchestra has Eddie Daniels at the baton. This versatile maestro is also master at the piano, the vibraphone and the base viol. He has a smooth, easy rhythm all his own. His orchestra is especially suited to the Pall Mall Room. Two pianos and two violins, besides the usual trap drums, clarinet, saxophones and bass viols provide music that is rich in melody and easy to dance to. Eddie has a variety of clever novelty numbers and surprise acts of his own in store for you.

Only the rich can afford it, I guess—I am referring to Jimmy Byrd and the vacation that he is taking now in Florida. Jimmy left last week and will be gone for about two weeks. During his sojourn, entertainers down at the Mayfair are Beverly Stull, accordionist; Otis Manning, a master at magic, and Leo Lisee, who sings.

WPA Workers Held Enslaved in South

A system of slavery comparable to that of the prewar South exists among colored workers of the WPA in lower Louisiana, Douglas Brown, chairman of the New Orleans branch of the Workers Alliance, charged last night.

Two thousand New Orleans WPA workers were lined up by a foreman and forced, under threat of being "through with the WPA for good," to work in the cane fields, Brown said. He filed his charge with David K. Niles, assistant administrator of labor relations for the WPA.

They worked on the estate of Senator Ellender, of Louisiana, among others, Brown charged, and were promised $1.50 a day and good board and shelter, but in many cases did not get it.

Many workers returned to New Orleans, weakened with flu or colds, but their WPA status was intact because of their servitude, he said.

Niles was in Rochester, Minn., last night and could not be reached for comment.

Coddle Moth Held Enemy of Apple

The diminutive brown, coddling moth is the deadliest enemy of the apple, Dr. Thomas J. Headley entomologist at the New Jersey State College of Agriculture, told 300 delegates to the Middle Atlantic Fruit Growers Conference at the Raleigh Hotel yesterday.

The female of the species, he added, is more deadly than the male. She is attracted by the scent of the trees, secludes herself in the bark, lays her eggs. Then the young demolish the apples, causing most of the "wormy apples" of the world.

Trade Soaring With Treaties, Hull Declares

1937 Exports and Imports Showed Big Increase, Says Secretary.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull, in a statement yesterday, said 1937 was a prosperous year for American ports because of revival of foreign trade. This revival, he said, was due partly to trade agreements.

Hull said United States exports for the first 11 months of 1937 amounted to $3,026,872,000, an increase of $800,694,000, or 36 per cent over the same period of 1936, while imports totaled $2,875,202,000, an increase of $897,771,000, or 32 per cent.

He gave the following table of goods, in long tons, moving through principal ports in 1929, 1933 (the year before initiation of the trade agreements) and 1936:

	1929	1933	1936
New York	27,889,000	12,279,000	15,937,000
Philadel...	6,115,000	3,905,000	4,534,000
Baltimore..	5,357,000	2,108,000	4,681,000
Boston....	2,509,000	1,669,000	2,136,000
New Orleans	5,800,000	2,887,000	3,705,000
Calif. ports	10,529,000	6,944,000	9,399,000
Wash. ports	4,021,000	1,673,000	2,395,000

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Clyde B. Aitchison directs the Interstate Male Chorus in its forty-sixth concert Tuesday night in the new Interior Department auditorium, with Cathreen Carrico, soprano, as guest artist.

For 17 years Commissioner Clyde B. Aitchison has found surcease from his official cares in conducting the choral section of the Interstate Commerce Commission Club, thereby proving, as did Frederick the Great, that a musical avocation is not incompatible with affairs of state. In selecting compositions for his 40-odd singers, arranging folk songs and rehearsing his faithful group of amateurs, he has spent part of his leisure time to the profit of his artistic interests and to the enjoyment of those who have attended the public concerts of the organization.

A large audience of invited guests assembled last evening in the new Interior Department auditorium for the first concert of the eighteenth season. The program, not in the least hackneyed, thanks to the director's discriminating taste, held several compositions novel to all the listeners. For one, there was Beethoven's terzetto, "Song of Farewell," which has probably never before been sung in this country, and certainly not in the English text by Henry S. Drinker. An interesting work, it is in Beethoven's "unbuttoned" mood, half serious and half in jest.

For the first time in Washington, and perhaps elsewhere, was heard one of the latest compositions by the late Henry Kimball Hadley—a triptych of songs with texts from Omar's "Rubaiyat." The verses are familiar enough—"Wake, for the sun behind yon eastern height," "A book of verses underneath the bough," and "Ah, fill the cup"—but the music is unlike that of any other setting. Excellently constructed and urbane, as are all of Hadley's works, it has a strain of melancholy unusual for him, as though he had a premonition that he was soon to meet the "Angel of the Darker Drink."

Among other items on the program were Arthur Thayer's "Song of Prince Rupert's Men," Heinrich Pfeil's "Calm Is the Lake," Commissioner Aitchison's arrangement of the old Scotch melody, "The Flower of the Forest;" Weber's "Lutzow's Wild Chase." Theodore Podbertski's "God Bless Thee, Love, Forever," and Charles Burnham's "Memory."

Cathreen Carrico, guest artist of the evening, was accompanied by Christopher S. Tenley in two appearances. Her agreeable and clear soprano voice was heard to advantage in an aria from "Le Nozze di Figaro." Edward Horsman's "Bird of the Wilderness," Kurt Schindler's "The Three Cavaliers," and Mozart's familiar "Alleluia."

D. C. Subpenas Tax Delinquents

Approximately 2,000 persons in the District, who have failed to file personal tax returns or who have failed to secure data to verify tax returns that have been filed, are being subpenaed by the police, Tax Assessor Fred D. Allen announced yesterday.

Failure to file a return or produce records in the office of the assessor within 10 days from the date of service of the subpena would result in court action, it was explained.

Issuance of subpenas began Monday.

16 Yuletide Parolees Violate Return Pledges

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 4 (AP).—Missing Christmas parolees became parole violators on Alabama prison records tonight, and authorities admitted at least 16 of 554 who won two-week vacations were still out—48 hours over the reporting deadline.

As parole violators they are subject to immediate arrest, and when brought back, as they usually are, they face prison punishment that could include a lashing and solitary confinement.

Businessmen Open Contest For Air Emblem

The Federation of Business Men's Associations, in co-operation with The Wshington Post, yesterday announced a prize contest to obtain a suitable design for a general display emblem for the federation.

The design should typefy the federation and must be in that organization's colors—blue and gold. It should be suitable for various display uses, such as shop decorations, general advertising, letter-heads, etc., as well as for reproductions in jewelry. There are no restrictions as to style or size.

Contestants must be bona fide residents of Washington. The only residents ineligible to compete are members of the federation, or its affiliates and their families, and employes of The Washington Post or members of their families. A contestant may submit any number of designs.

The contest will close February 1. The prize of $25 will be awarded by a board of judges, who will be announced later. Entries should be addressed to the Emblem Editor, Washington Post.

The federation, through its affiliates, comprises more than 50 per cent of the independent business establishments of the city. The ten associations which compose it are:

The Georgetown Business Men, Connecticut Avenue Association, Columbia Heights Business Men, Cleveland Heights Business Men, Georgia Avenue Business Men, Brookland-Woodridge Business Association, New Center Market Dealers, Northeast Business Men, Southeast Business Men and the Central Business Association.

Kennedy Is Off To West Coast For Ship Study

By the Associated Press.

Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Maritime Commission, and six members of the commission's staff headed for the West Coast last night for an on-the-scene study of the shipping situation.

While no formal itinerary was announced, Kennedy and his aides, after stopping first at San Francisco, are expected to visit Los Angeles, Seattle and Portland.

In Kennedy's party were Max O'Rell Truitt, general counsel; Joseph R. Sheehan, executive director; E. C. Moore, administrative assistant to Kennedy; Harvey Klemmer, director of special studies; Knight Aulsbrook, of the legal staff, and Miss Ruth Greene, secretary to Kennedy.

One primary purpose of the trip, it was said, is to study the Dollar Line. This line has received no Government aid since cancellation of the ocean mail contracts six months ago, and has been conducting negotiations for an operating subsidy.

Kennedy has been represented as seriously concerned over contentions of the Grace Line and Panama Pacific Line that they cannot operate profitably in the intercoastal trade since cancellation of ocean mail contracts. Intercoastal lines are not eligible for operating-differential subsidies.

Blood Tests For Alcohol to Be Sought Here

Health Officer George C. Ruhland announced yesterday that he would seek the advice of Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal regarding the legality of a compulsory blood test for all apparently intoxicated persons brought to municipal hospitals.

It was believed that Dr. Ruhland's action came as a result of a Gallinger Hospital interne releasing Thomas P. Gallagher on New Year's morning after the man had been brought to the hospital by police who thought him intoxicated.

Gallagher was given treatment and later turned over to police.

Procedure Used Elsewhere.

Dr. Ruhland believes that such a system, whereby it would be a regular routine to take a blood test of all persons under suspicion of being intoxicated, would safeguard both the District and the intoxicant.

"This procedure is not entirely new," Dr. Ruhland said. "Most metropolitan police departments employ the method."

As it later developed in the case of Gallagher, the man suffered a possible brain concusion, which apparently was overlooked by the hospital physician.

Test Permanent Record.

Should charges be pressed against the District on the theory that the man was not intoxicated, it might be difficult to disprove, it was explained. However, a blood test of an intoxicant would be a permanent record.

In the meantime, Gallagher, who resides at 629 E street southwest, was returned to Gallinger Hospital Sunday after being released by police. His condition was reported to be satisfactory yesterday.

Assistant Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger, who conducted an investigation of the case, stated yesterday that "It was closed."

Pine and 24 Aides Discuss Means of Clearing Docket

Hoping to accelerate the trial of several hundred jury cases awaiting action in Police Court, Acting United States Attorney David A. Pine late yesterday conferred with his 25 assistants, seeking suggestions on how to bring the docket to date. At the end of two hours, the meeting was adjourned until tonight.

Meanwhile, it was shown that of the four judges in Police Court, only one was a full time jury court judge. Another judge assigned to United States cases takes over jury trials after he has concluded his ordinary business, which takes half his time. The judges rotate their assignments monthly.

It was learned the new Police Court Building would be ready for occupancy possibly within a month.

The Silk Hat: Man's Crowning Glory

Wide World Photos.

1. A haberdasher stampeded Londoners one day in 1797 by wearing the first high hat. He was charged with inciting a riot, because he "wore a tall hat having a luster calculated to frighten timid people." From that day a silk hat has been the symbol of arrogant wealth. The industry is one of a handful remaining a handcraft. There are fewer than 100 high-hat experts in the United States. Charles Alsberge (left), 80, is a veteran of the trade.

2. The body of a "silker" is made of calico, stiffened by dipping in shellac as above. Originally, the hat or cap was a symbol of rank rather than head protection. In ancient Rome, slaves received hats when freed to show they were out of bondage.

3. One hundred years ago a Frenchman, Antoine Gibus, invented the collapsible or "opera hat" to facilitate the checking of tall hats at the opera. His heirs still get a royalty on every one made. The patent office here is filled with inventions to complicate the simple structure of the hat, but Gibus' hat is the only mechanical hat that has survived. Collapsible frames are shown above.

4. A silk hat in the final stages of construction receives its silken cover (above). The rules for high-hat wear are rather inflexible. The "silker" is mandatory for all formal day functions. For evening wear either an opera hat or "silker" is proper.

5. After the sides, brims and top of a silk hat are sewn together they undergo ironing and steaming to draw them taut. The heat also melts the shellac, causing the plush to adhere to the stiff form without a wrinkle.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—Sensational worldwide advances of wheat prices, 3¼ cents a bushel in Chicago, 4¼ at Liverpool and 5 cents at Winnipeg, followed waves of buying today.

Cables reported that President Roosevelt's message to Congress had given more confidence to markets abroad. This, together with big European purchases of North American wheat, about 1,500,000 bushels, mostly wheat from the United States, formed the chief apparent basis for the buoyancy of values.

At the close Chicago wheat futures showed 2⅝ to 3¼ cents jump compared with yesterday's finish; May, 93½@93⅝; July 87½@87⅝. Corn up ⅞ to 1¼ cents; May 62¼@62⅝; July, 61¾. Oats ¼ to ⅜ cent advanced. Rye showed 1⅞ to 2¼ cents bulge, and provisions dearer, 2 to 12 cents.

Lumber Production 34 Per Cent of 1929

The lumber industry during the holiday week ended December 25, 1937, stood at 34 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 35 per cent of average 1929 shipments. December is always the lowest month of the year in lumber output and movement. For the third consecutive week since May reported new orders were above production, which was much curtailed due to year-end shutdowns.

The week's reported production was 17 per cent less than new business booked and about the same as reported shipments. Reported production, shipments and orders were all below the preceding week and below the corresponding week of 1936. Lumber production and shipments in the year 1937 were less than 2 per cent above 1936.

B. & O. Carloadings.

For the previous month of November, 1937, total loads were 179,791, of which 117,236 cars were loaded on line and 62,555 received from connections. During the week ended January 1, 1938, carloadings totaled 26,465 and for the same week of last year the total was 41,066. For the previous week total loads were 29,362.

Stocks Advance in Last Hour With War Shares Leading; Wheat and Cotton Higher.

New York, Jan. 4.—United States bonds were irregular on the eve of the budget message, the dollar hardened and speculative markets turned buoyant. Commodities advanced in most sections, and stocks, under the leadership of armament shares and the commodity issues, opened with a firm tone, worked higher in the early trading, held level through the middle of the day and closed with a rush to higher prices. Active stocks touched prices that were 2 to 5 points higher in the closing dealings. Stock turnover was around a million shares. May wheat closed 3⅛ cents higher at 93⅝ cents a bushel. Cotton futures worked about a dollar a bale higher.

Second thoughts on the President's message to Congress did not change the general opinion much. That boiled down to the agreement that the message was not especially encouraging, but that it was much better than had been feared after the bombarding from other members of the Administration that business has had to take. From a long-range economic viewpoint, the plain intimation that the budget would be kept out of balance a good deal longer, that spending would be increased, and that the President was doggedly determined, come what might, never to balance the budget unless he could suck more taxes out of the public was discouraging. It was so because expenditures are lifted to a base that was justified to begin with as an emergency affair.

Emergency Funds.

Those emergency expenditures that now are to become permanent expenses of the Government have been provided largely out of borrowing. That can't go on much longer, and neither can it be expected, that the tax level can be raised much unless business is permanently to be crippled. A tax system that, in all departments, takes one-fifth of the national income is certainly a handicap to prosperity and a great deterrent to schemes for promoting the more abundant life. The supply of rich men's capital won't last long and then the poor will have to pay in one way or another. Even to maintain the current huge tax revenues a much greater degree of prosperity than now is being enjoyed must be had.

President Roosevelt appears to feel that the problem can be solved in some mysterious way by jacking up the national income. Could that be done then automatically tax collections could increase without raising the percentage of taxes to income. Unfortunately some of the measures proposed for social and economic reform do not seem to be consonant with lifting the national income. An increase in national income means an increase in total production, with or without a rise in commodity prices.

The whole tendency of much of the New Deal economic planning has been away from greater production; it has aimed at farm acreage abandonment, reduced crops, shorter working hours in labor, increased costs all round, and the discouragement of the profit motive. The spectacle of a great nation feverishly working to amass temporary profits for the tax collector only is not likely to be seen except in emergencies more appealing to the imagination than those involved in an economic depression coming in the midst of a noble experiment in economic planning. People tire of a war on depression even more quickly than they weary of a war against an aggressor nation.

Meanwhile, Wall Street's attention was focused on the coming budget message of the President as a clew to what sort of taxes were to be proposed and how much of an increase would have to be endured. While speculation on that score went forward, the markets leaned further to the side of expectation of another great inflationary drive to be organized as the pains of the depression become increasingly felt.

Stock Movements.

In addition to this special strength in the war stocks—steels, shipbuilding, airplanes—and the industrial pivotal issues, the motor and tobacco shares turned buoyant. No especial reason for the runup in the tobaccos was advanced, but many of those stocks have rather thin markets and respond easily to buying. Philip Morris gained about 5 points. Some of the others rose 1 to 3 points. Bethlehem and United States Steel rose about 4 points each, reaching their best in the last hour on a little hurried short covering and a stampede of buyers to get in early on what some of them seemed to think as the beginning of an inflationary drive. General Motors and Chrysler led the motor division with 3 to 4 points climbs. Oils, rubbers and chemicals improved. Metals gained a point or so. Utilities were firm and even the rails were steady. Erie preferred nevertheless sank into new low ground. Electric equipments were popular.

Obligation.

In criticizing the Chesapeake & Ohio directors, i. e., the new owners of the controlling interest in Alleghany Corporation, for failing to guarantee an RFC loan to Erie, and thereby preventing default on Erie bond issues and possible receivership for the road, Chairman Jesse Jones of the RFC raises an interesting point of debtor-creditor relationship. Many bondholders who have seen their holdings go through the wringer while stockholders have come out with whole skins, or nearly so, heartily will agree with Mr. Jones. On the other hand, those who belong to that school of financial thought which holds that a bond investment is not really a loan, but merely an investment in a security, the same as is the purchase of a share of stock, will not agree that the stockholder is morally obliged to discharge all bond obligations of his corporation before taking anything for himself.

Possibilities.

In the early stages of his stewardship of the RFC, Mr. Jones was a great plugger for the interests of common stockholders in railroad reorganization proceedings, as against bondholders, possibly because his natural bent was that way and possibly also because the RFC had more to gain on that position. More recently Mr. Jones has turned to the bondholders as one deserving of the "equity" owners' last cent. If the principle is to rule that, in case a road which controls another and which governs financial policy and works out traffic programs to suit its own best interests (those of the controlling road) must come to the financial aid of the weaker line or give up its control, some interesting possibilities will be opened up for the Pennsylvania and the Seaboard, Wabash, et al, for the Southern Pacific and Cotton Belt and for a number of other main stem systems which have control of other roads now on the borderline of solvency.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 4.—The stock market turned firmer after a cautious opening and prices closed generally higher. International issues improved sharply late in the session and there was a good demand for the gilt-edged group, mining shares and electrical equipments. The industrial section was quiet; together with oils and coppers. Brazilian bonds declined.

Paris—International securities were in better demand in the bourse today, royal Dutch advancing more than 100 francs and Suez Canal gained 50 francs. Banking and coal shares moved irregularly while rentes closed with net gains of 20 to 40 centimes.

Liverpool—Cotton futures advanced 4 to 6 points on professional buying with a scarcity of contracts. January liquidation was absorbed by covering. Improved buying of foreign wheat by United Kingdom importers and firm Winnipeg and Buenos Aires prices caused wheat futures here to move up sharply and closed 3d to 3¼d net higher.

The position of the Treasury on December 31:

Holiday Drop Cushioned by Slash in Prices

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 4.—The usual post-Christmas drop in retail trade was allayed this week as retail buyers took advantage of drastic price cuts effected by merchants to further reduce inventories, Dun & Bradstreet said today in their weekly trade review.

Demand for goods was stimulated by well advertised clearance events, and the summary reported that "complaints from customers were numerous of the inability to obtain desired grades and sizes of merchandise."

"Evidently the public had been holding back purchases awaiting these downward revisions, as patronage on the best days nearly was as large as on some of the poor ones of the week preceding," the review added.

"At all leading centers of distribution, volume shrank from the proportions to which it had been expanded by the gift-buying rush during the final holiday selling period. In sepite of the rain and higher temperatures in many sections, however, enough consumers were attracted to the store-wide disposal sales of marked down merchandise to keep the estimated volume of retail distribution from 2 to 8 per cent larger than it was in the closing week of 1936, taking the country as a whole."

Wholesalers, the review added, were helped by more orders for early spring apparel and low priced merchandise for January selling.

Quotations on domestic wools were not showing any definite changes. Wool prices in Australia continued somewhat irregular, according to reports received by private concerns in Boston.

Loans to Banks Drop for Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday bank loans to business declined again last week.

In the week ended December 29, banks in 101 leading cities reduced loans for commercial, industrial and agricultural purposes $16,000,000 to $4,601,000,000. Business loans, responding partly to seasonal and partly to recession factors, have been on the decline for several weeks.

The board also reported the banks further reduced their holdings of Government securities by $49,000,000 to $8,018,000,000. Reflecting the return of Christmas shopping money to the banks, both demand and time deposits increased during the week.

VENTURI AND JESSURUN FACE OUSTER

The Washington Post Sports

18 WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 5, 1938 X*

This Morning..

With Shirley Povich

* * * *

Stalking the Stockholders.

Mr. Griffith: As president of the Washington Baseball Club, I hereby call to order the annual meeting of the stockholders. The secretary will please read the minutes of the last annual meeting.

POVICH.

Mr. Edward B. Eynon: The annual stockholders meeting of the Washington Baseball Club was held in the office of President Clark C. Griffith on January 4, 1937. Stockholders present were President Griffith, Vice President William V. Richardson, Secretary-Treasurer Edward B. Eynon, and a stranger, owning one share of the stock, whom we had never met socially. Furthermore, I don't know who let him in. President Griffith called the meeting to order and the stockholders voted to——

Mr. Richardson: I move that the secretary be congratulated on the excellence of his report and that it be approved.

Mr. Griffith: It is so ordered.

Mr. Eynon: Thank you, gentlemen.

Mr. Richardson: Mr. President, how much money did the Washington Ball Club make last year?

Mr. Griffith: Not much.

Mr. Eynon: I move that the president's excellent report of the fiscal operations of the Washington Club last year be accepted and that he be felicitated on his stewardship.

Mr. Richardson: I second the motion.

Mr. Griffith: It is so ordered, and thank you, gentlemen.

Mr. Richardson: Did the operation of the Chattanooga team by the Washington Club entail a loss last year?

Mr. Griffith: Yes.

Mr. Richardson: I move that the president be congratulated by the stockholders for selling the Chattanooga franchise.

Mr. Eynon: I second the motion.

Mr. Griffith: It is so ordered, and thank you, gentlemen.

* * * *

Mr. Eynon: What, in the estimation of the president, are the Washington Club's prospects for the 1938 season?

Mr. Griffith: We will have a fighting team.

Mr. Richardson: I move that the stockholders give the president a vote of confidence for his fearless stand on the 1938 team.

Mr. Eynon: I second the motion.

Mr. Griffith: Thank you, gentlemen.

Mr. Eynon: I have here the report of Mr. Billy Smith, operator of the Griffith Stadium concession stands.

Mr. Griffith: The secretary will kindly read the report of Mr. Billy Smith, operator of the Griffith Stadium concession stands.

Mr. Eynon: "Our slogan for last year, which I feel was very helpful, was 'When Man Bites Dog it Isn't News: It's a Habit of Griffith Stadium Fans.' We aim to continue the same slogan for our skinless frankfurters. The experiment of substituting single-jointed peanuts for the unweildy and more costly double-jointed goobers was successful. The fans didn't know the difference and they packed fewer to the bag. The saving of three peanuts per bag netted the club the tidy sum of $122,656.11."

Mr. Richardson: I move that the concessionaire's report be approved and that Mr. Smith be felicitated on his splendid administration of the goober department.

Mr. Eynon: I second the motion.

Mr. Griffith: On behalf of Mr. Smith, thank you, gentlemen.

* * * *

Mr. Richardson: Mr. President, can anything be done about the corporate taxes?

Mr. Griffith: Mr. Secretary-Treasurer, can anything be done about the corporate taxes?

Mr. Eynon: No.

Mr. Richardson: I ask that my remarks about the corporate taxes be struck from the record.

Mr. Griffith: It is so ordered.

Mr. Richardson: Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. Griffith: We will take up the matter of declaring a dividend for 1937.

Mr. Richardson: What is the President's feeling in the matter of declaring dividends?

Mr. Griffith: I do not believe that it would be the proper thing to declare a dividend at this time.

Mr. Richardson: I make the motion that no dividends be declared for 1937.

Mr. Eynon: I second the motion.

Mr. Griffith: I am glad, gentlemen, that we see eye-to-eye. By the way, where's my glasses?

Mr. Richardson: Mr. President, your glasses are in your hand.

Mr. Griffith: Oh, thank you, Mr. Vice President.

* * * *

Mr. Eynon: We are supposed to elect officers for the ensuing year.

Mr. Griffith: That's right. Nominations are in order.

Mr. Richardson: I nominate Mr. Griffith to succeed himself as president of the Washington Ball Club.

Mr. Eynon: I second the nomination.

Mr. Griffith: In the absence of further nominations, I again accept the presidency of the Washington Club. And thank you, gentlemen.

Mr. Richardson: We need a vice president.

Mr. Eynon: I nominate Mr. Richardson to succeed himself as vice president.

Mr. Richardson: I second the nomination.

Mr. Griffith: You are out of order, Mr. Richardson. I will second the motion if Mr. Eynon will take the chair.

Mr. Richardson: Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. Griffith: I declare this meeting adjourned.

Mr. Eynon: But we must elect a secretary-treasurer.

Mr. Griffith: That's right.

Mr. Richardson: I nominate Mr. Eynon to succeed himself as secretary-treasurer.

Mr. Griffith: We will consider the nominations closed.

Mr. Eynon: Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. Griffith: Thank you, Mr. Secretary-Treasurer.

Mr. Richardson: Is there any further business before the meeting?

Mr. Griffith: No. Where's my pinochle deck?

3d Victory Is Easy for Cadet Team

Gallagher and Giebel Star in Impressive Performance.

By Jack Munhall.

What had been billed as the first real test for the crack St. John's basketball team evolved into a mere workout yesterday afternoon as the Cagey Cadets easily won a 26-12 victory over Tech High School's undefeated team before a capacity crowd in the St. John's gymnasium.

Although spotting the public school lads many inches in height, the Johnnies experienced a minimum of trouble in notching their third successive triumph. They still eye the trip to Chicago and the Catholic Prep championship tournament.

The game also served as a comparative basis by which to judge St. John's and Gonzaga, chief threat to another city prep championship for the Cadets. The Purple lost a close battle to Tech last week, and despite the fact that Chip Collins, a dependable player, was missing, its performance did not match St. John's.

A Classy Pair.

Working easily at all times behind an early lead, the Cadets flashed a brilliant offense featuring the shooting of Smoky Joe Gallagher and Jim Giebel and the passing of Jimmy Mulvihill. Gallagher and Giebel, just about as classy a pair of ball players to grace any local scholastic five, worked smoothly and frequently counted on easy shots following quick breaks to the basket.

The St. John's defense was virtually impregnable during the first three quarters in which the regulars held forth and the only shots Tech was able to attempt were hastily flung from the center of the floor. Only in the last quarter was it able to show anything closely resembling a synchronized attack. Merrill Heddings, its 6-foot-5-inch center, no longer hampered by the leech-like guarding of Giebel, broke loose for several pivot shots. His heaves lacked accuracy and no damage was done the Cadets.

Gallagher Tops Scorers.

From the first few minutes of play it was apparent that the McKinley boys would be no more than nice fellows as far as beating St. John's was concerned. Geibel, slipping in a difficult side-court toss and then following with a free throw and a snowbird, jumped his mates into a 5-0 lead which was lengthened to 16-4 by half-time. And in the meantime St. John's so completely had blanketed their towering opponents that Tech could show but two field goals for its efforts.

Gallagher was the leading scorer with five field baskets and a pair of free throws for a total of 12 points; Giebel was next with 5.

In a bitterly contested preliminary, the St. John's junior varsity team came from behind to beat Roosevelt High School's jayvee representatives by a 16-13 score.

Wilson's Quintet Wins Over W. & L.

Woodrow Wilson High School's undefeated basketball team, preparing for its first interhigh series contest, polished off Washington-Lee, 27 to 15, yesterday in the Wilson gymnasium.

It was the third straight victory for Carl Heintel's boys who form the second team in the school's history.

Grabbing an early advantage, the Presidents held a 15-to-10 lead at the half and coasted home. The two Maloneys—Dave and Don—and Bill Hawksworth were the Wilson stars. Hawksworth tickled the mesh for 10 points, Don Maloney counted 8, while Dave played an excellent floor game.

Bethesda Hi Bows, 23-10

Hyattsville Five Deals Locals First Loss.

Closing with an effective last-half attack, Hyattsville High School's Five dealt Bethesda-Chevy Chase its first basketball loss yesterday, winning an easy 23-10 decision on the home floor.

Monkey-Wrench Business!

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Jan. 4.—Instead of starting the New Year right, the prize fight industry seems to be flirting with the same plague that all but destroyed championship interest some years ago . . . The "overweight" non-title bout this Friday between Freddie Steele, middleweight champion, and his No. 1 challenger, Fred Apostoli, would have been barred by previous New York rules . . . Meantime Henry Armstrong, the feather champion, wants to fight Lou Ambers, the lightweight titleholder, and Ambers would like to box Barney Ross, boss of the welters . . . At this rate it's only a question of time before Benny Lynch, the flyweight champion, expands sufficiently to become Britain's next challenger for the heavyweight crown.

More than one year was wasted signing Max Schmeling and Joe Louis for the return match that proved too logical for anybody to handle until Mike Jacobs finally got them together . . . But it's still uncertain where it will be held and the boys have their fingers crossed for fear something will happen to keep Joe and Max apart.

Southwest critics at the Cotton Bowl, which furnished more than 50 per cent of all the New Year's day grid thrills, put their o. k. on Whizzer White . . . Nine years separated two All-America products of Rockies, Dutch Clark and White, but like Pike's Peak, they're standouts . . . If there's successor in sight for White or Yale's Clint Frank, among collegiate footballers, it's Rice Institute's man mountain, Ernie Lain, who has two more years in which to worry opposing coaches.

Brown University's prexy, Henry M. Wriston, in blasting football critics for "reckless inaccuracy and want of humor," says: "The resources of this institution have grown steadily and not in ratio to success or failure in athletics."

To "old Browns," worried by their college's showing in recent years against "ivy league" rivals, he points out Brown has from 400 to 3,400 fewer available undergraduates, and cites a record of 26 games won, 3 tied and 66 lost in competition with Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Cornell, Dartmouth and Columbia—the "ivy big seven." . . . Brown and Colgate are negotiating for a renewal of their series, once a Thanksgiving Day fixture at Providence.

Abrams on Fight Card

Local Middleweight to Meet Red Finnigan.

Georgie Abrams, sensational local middleweight, undefeated in nine months of professional fighting, returns to action in an eight-round bout on Turner's weekly fight card next Monday at the Fourteenth and W streets arena.

Fresh from his decisive victory over Steve Mamakos two weeks ago, the promising 20-year-old artist-boxer, will meet Red Finnegan, New York youngster, in one of two co-feature bouts. The other bout is to be announced later in the week, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn announced.

Abrams has 14 consecutive victories to his credit, 7 by knockouts. Finnegan has fought such middleweights as Harry Balsamo, Billy Ketchem, Walter Woods, Paulie Walker, and Charlie Laughran, brother of the famous Tommy.

Local Fight Body Urges Suspensions

Rialto Show Called Off as N. Y. Solons Back Boxers.

By Bob Garrison.

For violation of District boxing laws, indefinite suspension of two New York boxers and their managers by the National Boxing Association was asked yesterday by the local commission.

Charging that Vittorio Venturi and Andre Jessurun and Managers Louis Soresi and Mike Burke had violated rule 35 of the District rules and regulations, the District commission, in a letter to Edward C. Foster, executive secretary of the national body, requested immediate action.

Jurisdiction of the powerful National Boxing Association embraces 39 States and five foreign countries. New York, though not a member, works under reciprocal agreement with the District. Both fighters must remain under suspension until they fulfill their contracts here, either against each other or another selected foe.

At the same time, Matchmaker Howard Livingston, to whom the contestants were under contract to fight here at the Rialto Fight Club Friday night, announced that "there is nothing else to do but postpone the show indefinitely." He said:

Rules Are Same.

"It is unfortunate that such a thing should happen, but under the circumstances the show will have to be called off. An attempt will be made, however, to get the same two boxers in the ring against each other next week and in the event that is not possible, at least one may appear against another opponent."

Cause of the suspension was pointed out in the District code of laws which states "when a contestant competes in a bout of more than four rounds he shall not be allowed to compete again until six days have elapsed." The rule is identical with one of the New York State Athletic Commission.

Under date of December 28, 1937, Jessurun and Venturi signed contracts to meet here Friday, January 7. In the meantime in New York City a match was scheduled between Selvi Sabin and Frankie Blair tonight. Sabin withdrew from the match and Venturi accepted the match scheduled for three days prior to the previously scheduled bout with Jessurun here.

Another Faux Pas.

Jessurun committed the same faux pas when he accepted a match to box Frankie Cinque last night, four days prior to his contest here.

Livingston's appeal to the Washington commission resulted in its asking the New York commission to postpone the two bouts so the principals in the scheduled Washington fight wouldn't be affected by fatigue when they met here.

The New York body, however, rejected the appeal but sympathized with the complainants. Commission chairman said it was too late to postpone the New York bouts.

It was then that Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chairman of the local commission, instructed Col. Heine Miller, secretary, to send details to the National Boxing Association and request the suspension of the principals on Livingston's contemplated card, as well as their managers.

Babe Didrikson Enters L. A. Open

Los Angeles, Jan. 4 (AP).—Mildred Babe Didrikson today entered the $5,000 Los Angeles Golf Open, which starts Friday at the city's Griffith Park links.

Harry Cooper, warming up to defend his open title, shot a 68 at Lakeside in North Hollywood yesterday.

Max Bishop Signs As Pocomoke Pilot

Baltimore, Jan. 4 (AP).—Arthur H. Ehlers, owner of the Pocomoke City Club of the Eastern Shore Baseball League, announced tonight he had signed Max Bishop to manage the club in 1938.

Bishop was a second baseman for ten years with the Philadelphia Athletics.

Sixth-Place Nats Profited In 1937; Officers Renamed

The sixth-place Washington Baseball Club of 1937 was a money-maker, it was revealed yesterday following the annual stockholders' meeting at Griffith Stadium.

In fact, the Washington team last season enjoyed its best year financially since 1934, President Clark Griffith admitted.

"We did not make a profit that compared with some of our most successful years," said Griffith, who declined to reveal the exact earnings of the club, "but we did not operate at a loss. It was a more profitable year than was 1938, when we finished fourth, or 1935."

The three men who own the controlling stock in the Washington team—President Griffith, Vice Presidaent William V. Richardson and Secretary Edward B. Eynon, jr.—called themselves to order and (1) re-elected themselves to office again; (2) failed to declare dividends on stock and (3) declared themselves pleased with the outlook for 1938.

The stewardship of President Griffith was enthusiastically approved and he was commended for his disposal of the Washington-owned Chattanooga franchise.

The failure of the Nats' farm teams to operate at a profit ate heavily into the earnings of the Nats, according to Griffith. The Chattanooga, Charlotte and Sanford clubs were a drain on the Washington team's treasury, he declared.

But Griffith is committed, nevertheless, to an expansion of his farm system in the hope that it will be more productive of talent for the Nats. He will continue working agreements with the Trenton and Salisbury clubs and is considering a proposition to take over the Orlando team of the Florida State League.

Nearly $100,000 was spent on the purchase of playing talent by the Nats during 1937. The greatest single item was the $20,000 paid the Minneapolis Club for First Baseman Jimmy Wasdell. The purchase of George Washington Chase, outfielder, from the Trenton Club, entailed a sizable sum, according to Griffith.

None of the Nats' three sensational rookie pitchers, however, necessitated an outlay of cash. Ken Chase, Joe Krakauskas and Ray Phebus were already the property of the Washington Club when they were called in from minor leagues.

Captains Clark Griffith and Henry Rodier Pit Forces in Another Undeclared War

By Walter Haight.

Remember when you participated in a drama that went like this?

SCENE—School yard.

TIME—10:30 recess.

Willie, aged 10, has just won 21 marbles from Johnnie, aged 10. They stand in line awaiting their turn for the horizontal bar.

J.—You might be able to beat me shootin' marbles, but you can't hang by your knees.

W.—Who wants to hang by his knees? Monkeys do that. My brother can hang by his toes.

W.—I bet you can't stand on your head.

J.—I don't believe you can either.

W.—My sister can.

J.—That's nothing my Pop was in the Navy during the war.

W.—Yes, and my Pop was in the Army.

J.—I'd rather be in the Navy than the Army.

W.—The Army was where the fightin' was.

J.—Your Pop never sunk a submarine.

W.—Your Pop never captured a machine-gun nest.

J.—My Pop's got medals home.

W.—My Pop's got medals and a wound certificate.

J.—I'll bet my Pop can beat your Pop.

W.—He can't beat my Pop 'cause my Pop comes from a fightin' family.

J.—My Grandpop shot an Indian.

W.—That's nothing, my Grandpop was with Jesse James.

J.—We've got the sword home that my Grandpop used in the Civil War.

W.—Yes, and we've got the musket home that my Great-grandpop used in the Revolutionary War.

J.—My Great-grandpop was an officer with John Paul Jones.

W.—Well, anyway, I can beat you shootin' marbles.

J.—I can beat you runnin'.

W.—I can beat you sailin' a kite.

J. I can beat you pitchin' horseshoes and playin' mominy-peg.

W.—I can beat you at duck-on-davey and blowin' a bean shooter.

J.—I dare you to knock it off.

W.—I dare you to knock it off.

(The bell rings.)

W. and J. (simultaneously)—I'll get you after school.

Curtain.

Half of the world doesn't know what the other half is up to and that's why only a scattered few know that there exists a Seventh and Florida Avenue Pleasure Club and a Jolly Thursday Night Association.

The S. F. P. C. holds its meetings in the Washington ball park office each afternoon from 2 to 5 p. m. The J. T. N. A. gathers each Thursday night at the Lucky Strike Bowling Alleys. President Clarke C. Griffith, of the S. F. P. C., and President Henry T. Rodier, of the J. T. N. A., met recently.

SCENE—Ball park office.

TIME—Thursday morning.

G.—I parlayed a roundhouse curve into a big-league ball club and a stadium.

R.—I parlayed an idea for an electric scoreboard into six publications and a printing press.

G.—You can't play bridge.

G.—You're not good at pinocle.

R.—I'm good at pinocle and I'm your master at cooncan.

G.—I can beat you at any game and what's more my Pleasure Club can beat your Jolly Alley gang.

R.—Remember what you're saying. Do you know that I've got Sam Rice, Big Supplee, Dorie Gruver—just to name a few?

G.—And don't forget, I've got Bucky Harris, Arch McDonald, Joe Cronin—how's that for the start of a line-up?

R.—Consider this official, sir: The Jolly Thursday Night Association hereby challenges the Seventh and Florida Avenue Pleasure Club to a series of matches, supremacy to be decided, once and for all, in the following: Bowling, golf, cooncan, bridge and pinocle.

G.—I accept.

And that, friends, was the birth of what is expected to develop into the keenest battles of bodies and minds ever fought here.

Here's how they will line up:

Jolly Thursday Night Association—Henry Rodier (captain), Sam Rice, Dr. Walton Schultze, Dr. Tom Rice, Hal Supples, Howard Ortel, Ralph Little, Dorie Gruver, Dr. Clyde Shade, Dr. Tom Webb.

Since I discovered that the bowling competition will be staged at the Lucky Strike alleys on Thursday night, both factions have refused to announce the place and hour for the other events.

And, between you and me—now keep it quiet—I understand that they also are contemplating competition in pingpong, tiddlewinks, Maypole dancing, crocheting and changing dy-dee dolls.

Sir Oracle, 1-2 Shot, Wins Photo Finish in Tropical Feature Race

MARYLAND FIVE TROUNCES BALTIMORE, 50 TO 32

In This Corner

He's a Real Savage Young Feller.

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright 1938, for The Washington Post.

New York, Jan. 4. — The scuffler from Shoapes Creek: We were sitting there in a wee cell of a dressing room at the Hippodrome, and I said to the amazing man before me, "When were you born?"

* * * *

He replied, "Wall—Ah cain't tell y'all perzackly, but paw says Ah'll be 31, come February 27. 'Course yuh cain't depend on paw."

* * * *

I said, "But this is your right name on the program—isn't it?"

He squinted at the printing and said, "Ah cain't read much. Why don' y'll read it to me?—yes, that's the name alright: Daniel Boone Savage. But down in Boyd County, Ky., all the neighbors calls me Leo 'cause that's paw's name. But I don't like Leo."

* * * *

Daniel Boone Savage squatted there on a little stool and scratched at his noggin with a big finger that muscled into the matted hair beneath the red bandana he wore to prevent his long hair from falling down into his eyes. A little more hair in his face wouldn't have done any harm, anyway, because Daniel Boone seemed to have hair all over his weather-beaten countenance. I mean he wore one of those Man-Mountain-Dean brown beards. And, speaking of Man-Mountain Dean, this Mr. Savage is supposed to be his successor as the greatest oddity in the rasslin' racket—a racket which now seems to comprise mostly oddities.

Mr. Savage was wearing light leather shoes, tight black trunks and a gunny sack slung over a big shoulder. Why the gunny sack? "Wall—ah had a bathrobe onct, but some city slicker stole it. An ah don't like to traipse around nekked 'cause cold air give me miseries in mah shoulders."

* * * *

I said, "I understand this is your first visit to New York? How do you like the big city?" Daniel Boone, a big fellow who packs 245 pounds of somewhat flabby flesh on a 6-foot 5-inch frame, pawed at his beard and said, "ah'll tell you the truth. Ah don't like Noo Yawk 'cause ah'm always gettin' lost. An' ah'm afraid ah'm goin' tuh git into trouble up here 'cause ah don' know city style scufflin'. Down in Kentucky, when ah scuffles ah just holds on until the other feller hollers 'calf rope.' Mr. Fabiani says ah cain't hold on thataway up heah. So ah's sorta perjiggered."

Ray Fabiani is the wrestling promoter in New York and Philadelphia.

* * * *

How long had the brown-whiskered hill billy been grappling as a professional? "Ah calculate must be nigh on two, three yars. Fust time ah got paid for scufflin' was down in Kilgore, Tex. Went down with a man who was takin' some hosses. Ah paid 15 cents to see the scufflin'. Somebody didn't show up. They asked me to scuffle. Ah did, an' won. They paid me $1.67. Seemed like awful easy money tuh me. Ah been doin' it 'tween times, ever since."

* * * *

Between what times? Well—it seems that Daniel Boone's heart is not wrapped up in the mat. He gets homesick for those Kentucky hills and the old farm in Boyd County. So Dan and his beard return to the farm as soon as possible after every match.

Mr. Boone Savage explains he can't trust "Paw" on the farm because "Paw" has passed his seventieth "spell" and won't listen to "Maw," who has passed her sixtieth "spell." For example, "Ah shouldn'ta come up here nohow. 'Cause Paw'll be hittin' out for town shortly with our terbaccer raisin's. An' the city slickers'll take him again. Last time he went to Greenup, he cum back with $32. An' we all had hard eatin' for quite a spell."

* * * *

Mr. Savage will cut his first Eastern visit quite short. He wrestled and threw one Ivan Vacturoff of Russia at the Hippodrome Monday night. He tackles Chief Thunderbird in Philadelphia, Thursday night. Then he tangles with some opponent in Washington, D. C., next week.

* * * *

Despite his love for the old Boone-Savage farm, Daniel certainly must have ambitions to win the heavyweight wrestling title? "Naw—naw—ah don't want none o' those titles," he declared in alarm. "Ah jus' likes to scuffle and pick up a few dollars. Ah won four titles traipsin' around, but always felt sorry for the other feller after ah beat him and ah told him he could keep his champeenship—fellers like that O'Mahoney from Ireland."

No, Daniel isn't married, but he's "sparkin'" a gal named Hilda Pickles on Shoapes Creek. Are they engaged? "Ah don' know, but ah'm claimin' her," he replied.

* * * *

I have given you a quick portrait of Daniel Boone Savage, who admits to having wrestled in Los Angeles, St. Louis and Kansas City and to having played the part of the hermit lover in the movie, "Swing Your Lady."

* * * *

Is he a genuine hill billy? I don't know. If he isn't, he's a swell actor and in a line where acting really counts. Anyway he's the strangest bozo I ever met in sports. Even stranger than Man Mountain Dean, who spent three hours one night telling me about his boyhood on Stone Mountain, Ga. Since then I learned that the Man Mountain was feared on New York's East Side.

Honey Cloud Beaten in Final Stride

Mondorf Is Third as Camera Favors Outside Horse.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 4. The many in today's throng of about 7,000 who installed Norman W. Church's big Bulldog colt, Sir Oracle, a 1-to-2 shot in the Melbourne Purse raised their voices in high glee when the camera decision found their selection a nose winner of the sprint feature. Sir Oracle charged up on the outside of A. J. Abel's Honey Cloud in the stirring duel to the wire and the "eye-in-the-sky" device saw the favorite first on the finish line.

Third money went to Mrs. Emil Denemark's Mondorf, three lengths back. Sir Oracle finished the 5½ furlongs in 1:05 2-5 to pay $3.10. Of the $10,937 wagered in the straight pool, $6,328 was on the California-owned colt. Jockey Vere Thompson scored his second success of the day astride the strapping victor. It was Sir Oracle's second score in a row at this point.

Neither Thompson nor Albert Schmidl, who rode Honey Cloud, covered himself with glory. Schmidl seemed a bit too confident in the drive through the last furlong, and he apparently payed too much attention to his left side instead of his right, where Sir Oracle came up with his dying bid. Even so, there was much surprise when the photo verdict went to the favorite instead of the inside horse.

Gold Buckle Scores.

Honey Cloud, Mondorf and Sir Oracle raced heads apart to the far turn, where Thompson, on the rail, appeared to ease back off the pace. He took around the leaders and plied his whip vigorously through the stretch until about 50 yards from the wire, where he put the "bat" away and handrode. Mondorf weakened in the last furlong.

Gold Buckle, with Vere Thompson handling the reins, got form players off to a flying start with a driving victory in the initial event of six furlongs. The veteran son of Polydor ran a game race. He first had to race Primer into submission, then stalled off the determined bid of Exhort and beat that fellow by two lengths to return $4.30. Exhort was much the best of the others, holding five lengths advantage over Beaver Lake for the place. The winner finished in 1:12 2-5 over a fast track.

Four of the 11 starters finished half lengths apart in the second dash, in which 3-year-old platers were on exhibition. Kenneth McCombs drove Aminta, a $16.90 for $2 chance, first to the wire. Time and Again, which made the running by a narrow margin, saved the place in front of Legal Dance and Liberty Torch. The fancied Spindletop dropped out of contention in the final quarter. Aminta gradually improved her position. She swept around the early leaders, swerved in through the stretch and got up in the closing strides.

If 'Chuck' Keeps Chucking 'Em In He'll Be Tops

By James P. Emerson,

United Press Sports Writer.

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 4.—Charles (Chuck) Chuckovits was on his way tonight to an all-time individual season's scoring record for modern college basketball.

The 23-year-old University of Toledo forward already has chalked up 163 points in six games, almost an average of 24 points per game.

His outstanding basket-tossing feat so far this season is 41 points—17 field goals and seven free throws—when Toledo defeated Adrian College, 81-18.

In his last start January 2 against the strong University of Michigan five, the Toledo sharpshooter hung up 19, exactly one-half of his team's points. Michigan won, 50-38.

If Lady Luck continues to smile on Chuck, his total for the current season would be near the 550 mark. A more certain goal would seem to be 400 points and, barring injuries, Chuck should have no difficulty in cracking his own Ohio season's record of 352 points in 22 games hung up last year.

In other Toledo games this season he pushed in 24 points against Bluffton, 22 against Franklin, 20 against Iowa, Big Ten five, and 17 against Illinois Wesleyan.

The future task of holding dow this basketball wizard falls to Ball State, Ohio University, Kent State, John Carroll, Ohio State, Xavier, George Washington, Loyola, Western State Teachers, Akron, Dayton and Long Island. Loyola and Western State will face the Toledo club twice each.

He became a star on the Toledo freshman squad and in between frosh games, cracked scoring records in three city amateur leagues.

In his junior year, the Akron youth now weighs 175 pounds and stretches slightly over 6 feet in height. He specializes in a right-handed push shot which opponents, many of them physically bigger, find almost impossible to stop.

Consequently, Chuck gets plenty of chances from the free throw line as opposing players foul him. And a free chance is all he asks to score more points.

Despite an uncanny eye for the basket, Chuckovits is not regarded as a "shooting prima donna" by teammates. He doesn't "hog" the ball and is a good defensive player, always ready to pass to a teammate for a "setup" shot.

When he entered Toledo, he also had a baseball reputation as a good first baseman. But he has given up the diamond sport for exclusive attention to basketball. He wants to cash after graduation.

The football saga of Lawrence T. (Buck) Shaw, at this writing a monumental figure on the national coaching scene, is something to bring a pink blush of shame to the cheek of Horatio Alger, the author, whose heroes somehow managed to win the gal and a sizable wad of dough in 26 spine-tingling chapters.

Shaw's Boswell for these particular paragraphs is "Fod" Cotton, Catholic University's capable line coach, who played in the same Notre Dame line with him back in the lush days of 1922 when the gridiron world was first becoming conscious of Knute Rockne and his shift. In accord with a custom that seniors help coach undergraduates, Shaw inducted Cotton into the mysteries of tackle play, so Cotton knows whereof he speaks.

* * * *

"He was a great guy," Cotton remarked affectionately, "and a great football player. They didn't make any mistake when they put that guy on the All-Time All-Notre Dame team. He was the kind of a player that tackled 'em around the ankles, and was always on the bottom of the pile—deep down where he couldn't be seen by the sports-writers.

"He was quiet and modest, and had a perfect build. We had a contest to determine the best built man in school that year and Buck won it hands down. He was an Adonis if there ever was one. Weighed 200 pounds, stood about 6 feet, had small hips, broad shoulders and was a good looking guy. He was built to be a football player."

* * * *

But "Fod's" story really doesn't begin until the winter of 1928, when Shaw, broke, discouraged and out of a job, was sitting with him in the lobby of a Des Moines hotel, watching couples file by into the ballroom. They sat there for about an hour before Shaw finally spoke.

"Gee, Fod," he said, "it must be great to be able to dress your daughter like these girls. I wonder if I'll ever be in the big dough? Sometimes I feel discouraged, and wonder if I'll be just another flop. Then again, I sometimes feel like I'm gonna be somebody and have some dough and be able to give my wife and baby the clothes and things they need and should have."

* * * *

Cotton looked away for a minute. He was doing all right, financially, coaching three sports at St. Ambrose College and playing professional football in season, and he, having an infant daughter, like Shaw, knew Shaw's feelings.

Actually, however, there didn't seem to be much hope for the man. He had been assistant to Gus Tebell at North Carolina State, and resigned after an unhappy tenure. From there he went to Navada as head coach and flopped dismally. He was without a job the evening he sat with Cotton and had absolutely no prospects of getting one, at least, not a football berth. He'd tried selling stocks and bonds for his brother, but it was a fruitless venture. Buck was too quiet, too easy-going to clinch a sale.

* * * *

Then "Clipper" Smith, an old friend and a good one, landed the Santa Clara job. He thought of Shaw and wired him an offer to coach the line. Well, you know the rest. Smith left to accept a similar position at Villanova and Shaw stepped into his boots, and he's been a howling success. His teams lost only one game in two years, that to the Texas Christian team that Sammy Baugh pitched for last year. And the record includes two Sugar Bowl victories over Louisiana State.

"Now," Cotton concluded, "he's sitting on top of the world. I've heard he's been offered a three-year contract at Southern California at 15 grand, and has bids from a couple of other colleges. But that's the way it goes in this game."

* * * *

"All of which proves," piped up "Hop" Sweeney, as Fod finished, "that the players make the coach."

"In a way they do, in a way," Cotton replied. "They did in Buck's case, because he had nothing to work with at Carolina or Nevada, and if he doesn't know fundamental football nobody does. But," he continued, evidently thinking of a couple of the swell lines he has developed at Brookland. "But don't forget a poor coach can ruin a good player, too!"

Lou Gehrig in Role Of a 'Gang Buster'

Hollywood, Jan. 4 (AP).—Lou Gehrig, baseball's "iron man," is here to make his film debut in a Western entitled "Rawhide."

To give the Yankees' first baseman an opportunity to display his talents, the script calls for a game. Gehrig, as a barnstorming athlete, then helps the ranch foreman, Smith Ballew, round up a very 'ough bevy of gangsters.

Redskins Get All-Star Bid

Baton Rouge Seeks Pros for Feb. 6 Game.

A fourth game was tentatively added to the Washington Redskins' exhibition tour when General Manager Jack Espey agreed to terms submitted by Louisiana promoters who are negotiating for a game to be played at Baton Rouge, La., on February 6.

Paul Carroll, former Louisiana State football star, and a group of associates are seeking to match the Redskins with an all-star Louisiana team. Three former L. S. U. stars, now with the Chicago Cardinals—Gaynell Tinsley, Pat Coffee and Rocky Reed—would appear with the Louisiana All-Stars.

The Louisiana State University Athletic Association which is cooperating in the negotiations has offered the use of the L. S. U. Stadium, seating 55,000 at Baton Rouge.

If negotiations are completed and Espey expressed the opinion that they would be, the Redskins would play in Baton Rouge following their game on January 30 at Houston against a team of Texas All-Stars. The Redskins will open their exhibition tour with a game against California All-Stars at San Francisco on January 16 and then move to Dallas to play the Chicago Bears on January 23.

Time Out!

BY CHET SMITH

Hoyas Clash With Violets In New York

Maryland Plays Randolph-Macon in Only Local Cage Game.

Georgetown's untested courtmen journey to New York today for their annual game in Madison Square Garden with New York University's representatives, leaving Maryland to supply the lone local game at College Park where Randolph-Macon will be the visiting attraction.

Georgetown's game will be the initial portion of a twin-bill that has Long Island pitted against Southern Methodist in the feature attraction, and the Hoyas are in for a struggle. Two defeats in as many years in their own baliwick have the Violets thirsting for revenge, and they are reported to have a powerful outfit this season.

But Georgetown, ever the spoiler, confidently expects to chalk up another victory. Coach Fred Mesmer probably will use Mike Petroskey at center, Harry Bassin and Kurtyka at forwards, Joe Murphy and John Schmidt at guards. To Schmidt, a sophomore sensation, will go the task of guarding Ed Carnevale, N. Y. U.'s leading scorer.

Maryland faces a fairly strong Randolph-Macon quintet on its home court, but should win. The Terrapins launched their post-holiday campaign last night against Baltimore University and will be on edge for the Virginians.

Grant Wins 2d Round Match in Miami Play

Atlanta 'Mite' Defeats Oscar Evans in Straight Sets as Seeded Players, Harris and Hines, Are Upset in Tourney.

By H. J. Aronstam,

United Press Staff Writer.

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 4.—Bryan "Bitsy" Grant, pint-sized Atlanta net star, continued his triumphal march in defense of his Miami Biltmore tennis title today in a round of play that saw two favorites driven from the championship lists.

The upsets were registered by young George Toley, of Los Angeles, who eliminated Charley Harris, of West Palm Beach, Fla., seeded fifth in the tournament and a former Miami Biltmore title holder, and Bernie Franks, of New York, who took the measure of Wilmer Hines, of Hollywood, Calif.

Playing a vigorous, smashing game, Bitsy took less than 20 minutes in eliminating Oscar Evans, of Miami, 6-0, 6-1. Evans, who a short while before defeated George Gallet, of Miami, 6-1, 6-0, offered practically no resistance as Grant experimented with his strokes.

Riggs Again Is Idle.

Bobby Riggs, of Los Angeles, America's second ranking player, who is seeded over Grant in the tournament, again failed to see action today after drawing a first-round bye when Bob Dickenson, of Miami, defaulted.

Harris was off form in dropping his match to Toley, 8-6, 6-4. Toley played a good, back-court game, but Harris' errors more than anything else were responsible for the upset.

Hines, formerly ranked ninth in the Nation and who is attempting a comeback after a two-year absence from competition, could not handle the fiery, baseline barrage of the younger Franks and lost in straight sets, 6—3, 6—4.

Other favorite players advanced according to form, although Martin Buxby, of Miami, who is seeded sixth, was extended to the limit to beat Campbell Gillespie, an Atlanta youngster, 6—2, 8—6.

Mulloy Has Easy Time.

Gardnar Mulloy, captain of the University of Miami tennis team, who is seeded seventh, had an easy time with Nelson Mason, of Jacksonville, winning 6—1, 6—1. Art Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla., fourth seeded, trounced Bud Hart, of Miami, 6—2, 6—1.

However, a new and potent threat to the seeded players developed today in Frank Kovacs, a smiling, unassuming youth from Oakland, Calif., who despite his 18 years, handled himself on the court with the grace and ease of a veteran.

Kovacs, who is a protege of Donald Budge, the world's No. 1 net star, displayed excellent form in racing through two opponents today. He downed Don Jacobs, of Miami, 6—1, 6—4, in a first-round match and returned in the afternoon to dispose of Lewis Duffs, of Toronto, Canada, 6—2, 6—3.

Ram Grid Ace On Mat Here

Siano to Meet Kilonis Thursday Night.

Another All-America football player who turned to wrestling as a means of livelihood will make his bow at Turner's Arena tomorrow night when Tony Siano, former Fordham captain, meets Mike Kilonis, of New York, in a 30-minute bout.

Siano, called the "mighty midget," and Kilonis will wrestle in support of the feature bout between Steve (Crusher) Casey and Jesse James.

In another 30-minute bout closed out yesterday by Promoter Turner, John Grandovich, of Russia, will meet Charley Strack, Middle West star.

Tomorrow night's match between the Irishman, Casey, and the Greek Adonis, James, promises to offer some of the best wrestling of the indoor season. Casey and James are strictly wrestlers, although the Greek knows more acrobatics than the Crusher.

Ruark Upsets Pro In Billiard Play

Gene Ruark, local amateur cueist, upset Chic Seaback, nationally known professional pocket billiard artist, in a 100-point exhibition contest last night at the Royal Parlors, 100-83.

After Ruark overcame an early lead, Seaback trailed him to the end. It was played in 20 innings.

The District amateur three-cushion tournament will be resumed tonight with two games scheduled. H. Baer plays Lamborn and then Other.

F. B. I. Cagers Play.

Bureau of Investigation, with its collection of former college stars, will seek its seventh straight victory tonight in the Heurich Cup League at the Heurich gym, meeting Treasury at 8 o'clock.

BUCK EVERETT, who was last seen here on the FREDDIE STEELE-HOBO WILLIAMS card in July, will ask the Boxing Commission whether or not he is still the District heavyweight champion . . . He was flattened in one round by EDDIE HOGAN in that appearance but hasn't been beaten by another local heavy . . . You can say one thing for BUCK . . . He never lays down on the job, but fights all the way . . . Of course, he's been knocked down quite regularly . . . MICKEY SHAW, the New York heavyweight, who came here to meet MURRAY KANNER, on TURNER'S Monday card and was declared to have a heart ailment, probably has now if he didn't before the examination . . . He had just passed the insurance and police department "physical" the day before in Gotham . . . He was to report for "rookie" duty on Commissioner LEWIS VALENTINE'S force and is wondering if the local board's finding will interfere with his appointment . . . If you are bothered, as we were, what that song haunting the airlanes is all about, it's "BEI MIR BIST DU SCHON" . . . and is translated, we are told, to mean "BY ME YOU ARE PRETTY!"

Those two officials of the George Washington-Ohio State basketball game at Tech High, Monday, were PAUL MENTON and JOHNNY NEUN, sports editor and writer, respectively, of the Baltimore Sun . . . NEUN is a former professional baseball player . . . Take it from DAN PARKER, New York Columnist, JOHN SULLIVAN, the 7 feet 4 inch bearded wrestler who performs here quite regularly, is none other than JOHN MALONEY, of South Boston, and used to wrestle around Minneapolis as "FARMER TOBIN" . . . He is scheduled to meet BRONKO NAGURSKI for the "world's championship" in the Hippodrome, January 10. . . . There are two players on the Baltimore Orioles ice hockey team named RIPLEY . . . At The Post

WITH BILL BENNINGS

Selections at Tropical Park.

Dear Al,

My story the other day about the fellow who bummed a dollar for eating money in a gambling joint and ran it into several hundred dollars bore fruit today when a friend reminded me of the one he pulled at Bowie. On opening day at that track one year the printing press broke down, and programs were much in demand. Our hero went out to Bowie for the air. He had been going badly and had only 20 cents when he arrived at the track. There were some programs being sold in the main betting ring and none in the clubhouse. Our hero sensed a chance to show profit so he invested his two dimes in two programs, which he rushed over to the fence at the clubhouse and sold for 25 cents each. With the 50 cents he bought five more and sold them for $1.25. When he returned for a fresh supply the man was running out and he bought only five more. These he sold to bring his capital to $2. He put the deuce on a long shot in the first race. The horse clicked, and when the program ended he had had six winners and one second. Of course, our hero left the track with bulging pockets. And that, Benningites, is nice work if you can get it.

BILL.

First race—Miss Chicro has plenty of speed and finds a fieid that seems to suit her purposes. She will need all the foot she can put in her running, however, to take the measure of Milk. Flickering may be a little better than generally rated.

Second race—Highomar appears to be the right one in this rather open race. This one has worked briskly. Osirando and Miney Myerson will like the track and should be pressing the top one at the end.

Fourth race—Polyata, a recent winner here, turned in a smart performance and appears to have a slight edge over Evening Shadow. Sketchbook had speed in Maryland and is dangerous.

Fifth race—Headin Home should go well despite the excellent company, and I'm inclined to string along. Sun Power won last out and should be in the thick of contention again. Old Nassau for the minor award.

Sixth race—Veiled Lady shapes up well in a field of this type. Scudder won a sprint here and should give a good account of himself in this field. Live One should make a money appearance.

Seventh race—Putzen likes this route and needs only to run back to one of his good races. William V. and Later On to take care of the place and show positions.

Eighth race—One Chance is in rare form at present and any price will be a good one. Count Me and Emvee to do the No. 1 and No. 2 chasing.

Best bet—Polyata.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLD BUCKLE, $4.30, $3.00, $2.60; EXHORT, $4.20, $3.70; BEAVER LAKE, $7.70.

GOLD BUCKLE took command with a rush in the opening furlong, was steadied in front while saving ground in the early stages and drew out when placed to pressure to win easily. EXHORT, vigorously driven, improved his position while slipping through on the inside, was easily best of the others. BEAVER LAKE broke slowly, responded to strong urging, worked his way up on the inside and wore PRIMER down in the last few strides.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good, won driving; place same. Went to post 2:29. Off 2:30. Winner, H. and H. Stock Farm's b. or br. f. (3), by Ariel—Flavia. Two-dollar mutuels paid—AMINTA, $16.90, $7.00, $5.00; TIME AND AGAIN, $9.10, $6.30; LEGAL DANCE, $7.90.

AMINTA, slow to settle into her stride, gradually bettered her position on the extreme outside after going a half mile, responded to pressure determinedly and wore the leaders down through the stretch to win going away. TIME AND AGAIN displayed speed and raced LEGAL DANCE into defeat, took command entering the stretch, but then was unable to stave off the winner's bid. LEGAL DANCE, on the outside and in close attendance of the pace in the early running, faltered when it came to a drive.

DAILY DOUBLE, GOLD BUCKLE AND AMINTA, PAID $60.80.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700. For 3-year-old maiden fillies. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:03. Off 3:07½. Winner, R. H. Anderson's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NANCE, $3.20, $3.00, $2.30; MISS DAMARA, $14.30, $4.70; QUICK ACTION, $2.90.

NANCE took command at the start, held her opposition safe for speed and was steadied in front until midway around the turn, opened up a commanding lead at her leisure, bore out entering the stretch but maintained her lead under brisk urging. MISS DAMARA, well up all the way, moved up gamely on the outside in the last quarter mile, but was not equal to the winner. QUICK ACTION went in near pursuit of the leader for a half mile, saved ground entering the stretch and held the remainder safe.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:35. Off 3:37. Winner, A. C. Rose's br. f. (4), by Time Maker—Pinta. Trained by P. Reuter. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIME ME, $5.50, $3.10, $3.00; NOBLE BOY, $3.80, $3.40; KATCHICAN, $6.60.

TIME ME, away fast, was taken off the pace in the opening furlongs, responded willingly when called upon, gaining steadily on the outside and wore NOBLE BOY down in the final strides. NOBLE BOY began rapidly and displayed the most foot while saving ground, appeared to have a winning advantage on the stretch turn, but weakened when challenged. KATCHICAN, well up, but forced to race wide rounding the turn, closed stoutly to punishment and wore LUCKY JEAN down in the last 50 yards.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $900; allowances. For 4-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:04. Off at once. Winner, N. W. Church's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIR ORACLE, $3.10, $2.30, $2.20; HONEY CLOUD, $3.00, $2.60; MONDORF, $2.60.

SIR ORACLE, displaying good speed, took a short lead in the run down the backstretch. Thompson eased him off the pace leaving the backstretch, followed the pacemakers under restraint until well straightened into the stretch, closed with a determined challenge and got up in the last stride. HONEY CLOUD, on the outside, was pushed clear of MONDORF entering the stretch and appeared the winner 70 yards out, but Schmidt grew careless and tossed the race off. MONDORF, prominent in the early stages, weakened in the final furlong and just lasted long enough to stave off JULIET W.'s challenge.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:31. Off 4:36½. Winner, Mrs. G. H. Emick's ch. g. (5), by High Time—Admiral's Lassie. Trained by D. McDermid. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23, 0:46, 1:11 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROLLIN' HOME, $5.60, $3.90, $3.50; WITAN, $9.00, $6.30; WALTER MORTON, $8.90.

ROLLIN' HOME, quickest to get going, displayed high speed, drew off into a safe lead entering the stretch to win as his rider pleased. WITAN, keen factor on the outside from the start, finished gamely, but never seriously threatened the winner. WALTER MORTON, nearest in pursuit of the leader and saving ground all the way, faltered, yet continued gamely to hold LIPTON safe.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:03. Off 5:03½. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STOCKS, $12.10, $4.30, $2.70; BOOTMAKER, $4.10, $2.60; MUSCATINE, $2.90.

STOCKS, well ridden, followed the pace closely under light restraint to the stretch turn, drew out on the stretch turn, but was kept under vigorous urging to maintain his lead. BOOTMAKER drew out rounding the turn, made a game effort, but Arcaro clearly outrode Hartle. MUSCATINE, slow to find his stride, improved his position gradually on the outside and wore UP AND UP down in the last stride.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:33. Off 5:34½. Winner, B. N. Kane's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FIDELIS, $28.00, $12.40, $6.60; BANK HOLIDAY, $23.20, $9.20; MILL POND, $3.70.

FIDELIS, confidently ridden, moved up with determination on the outside in the final quarter mile, wore the leaders down to win going away. BANK HOLIDAY, rated off the early pace, moved up strongly when called upon and took command, but was no match for the winner. MILL POND, hustled to the front, showed the most speed, bore out rounding the lower turn then saved ground entering the stretch, but faltered when the real test came.

Loafer Is Winner At Fair Grounds

New Orleans, Jan. 4 (AP).—Loafer, making his second start at the Fair Grounds after winning four out of five at Tanforan, didn't do much loafing once he hit the stretch at the New Orleans oval today.

The 7-year-old gelding, owned and trained by E. Drillon, trailed during the early running of the six-furlong dash, but in the final drive closed fast to take the decision under the guidance of R. L. Vedder. As the favorite Loafer paid $5.40 straight.

Second money went to D. J. Sullivan 3d's Chancing, which alternated with Hastinola in setting the early pace. The latter did not finish in the money, however, as Cleveland Putman's Black Rhapsody got up in time to take third money in a photo finish.

Bob Burns Says—

Writing sure would be a wonderful business if you could just find a subject big enough and important enough to interest everybody. The other day I saw two women drivin' down Hollywood boulevard in a car. They was so busy talkin' that they went through a stop signal and ran into a big truck.

I thought to myself—now if I can jest find out what them women was so engrossed in, I'll have a subject that will hold the entire country spellbound—so I got into the ambulance that took the women to the hospital. On the way one of 'em fluttered her eyes and she opened 'em and kept lookin' at the other one until her eyes opened, too.

Then she says "All right, Ella, what was that you was sayin' about Mrs. Higgs?"

Congress Gets Federal Budget Figures Today

President's Message Expected to Show Deficit of Billion.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt completed yesterday a tentative chart of Federal spending in the 1933-39 fiscal year and well-informed officials predicted it would indicate a $1,000,000,000 deficit.

The budget will go to Congress today. Mr. Roosevelt told the legislators Monday it would not be balanced but that the deficit would be less than in the present fiscal year ending next June 30.

Figures Only Tentative.

The last official estimate of the prospective deficit for the current year was $895,245,000. Officials indicated, however, the message today would revise this figure up to about $1,250,000,000. This would be slightly less than twice the $645,068,770 deficit for the first half of the year, reported by the Treasury yesterday.

The budget is expected to give only tentative recommendations for relief and naval expenditures, the final totals to be determined later in the light of what the President may deem necessary because of the business recession and world rearmament.

$7,000,000,000 Cost Seen.

Last year Mr. Roosevelt delayed his estimates of relief appropriation needs until April so as to receive beforehand reports of the spring business and employment outlook.

The probability of some "supplementary" recommendations for naval construction was advanced by the President recently in a letter to Chairman Taylor (Democrat), Colorado, of the House Appropriations Committee.

Mr. Roosevelt indicated to Congress Monday he believed regular Federal expenditures could not be reduced below $7,000,000,000 a year. At the same time he expressed a desire for all possible economies.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

The Report.

The Veterans' Administration yesterday released a resume of its annual report for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1937, in the lengthy course of which interesting and illuminating facts are established. It was learned:

That "throughout this year there was continued the policy of consolidating field activities when this was possible without impairment of service to beneficiaries and to the advantage of the Government from the standpoint of savings in operating costs . . . It is roughly estimated that a saving of approximately 10 per cent in operating costs is obtained in combining regional offices with hospitals or homes, and in total this recurring annual saving has reached an aggregate of approximately $2,500,000. . . .

"Out of a total of 2,213,365 that served in the (Civil War), which terminated 72 years ago, pensions were being paid to 7,031 veterans on June 30, 1937." . . . On the same date pensions were going to 3,119 vets of Indian wars. . . . Spanish-American, Boxer Rebellion and Philippine Insurrection: The number of veterans on the rolls at the close of the fiscal year was 175,361, as compared to 179,169 on the same date of 1936. . . . And, incredibly enough, there were two pensioners as a result of the War of 1812. . . ."

The report goes on, with accomplishments achieved and improvements developed. But the report, as sent to the press, makes no mention of the Veterans' Administration employes as far as we could discover. The subject would have made very interesting footnotes—at least—to the general headlines of the report.

For nowhere, in all the agencies of the Federal establishment, have the complaints from employes been more persistent than in the V. A. And observers have felt this to be unfortunate, because in so many of the issues the hospitals' and facilities' heads have not been at blame. The core of the complaints has seemed traceable to understaffing.

• • • •

The Issue.

There still persists—though maybe in lessened degree—the issue of quarters, subsistence and laundry. This means that large groups of V. A. workers are assessed so much, monthly, for Q. S. and L. They have to pay it, whether they have taken advantage of quarters, subsistence and laundry as offered by the Government.

The deductions, in many cases, amount to as much as $32.50 a month, and this—mind you—regardless of whether the employes took advantage of Q. S. and L. There are many points at issue, and these have been summed up in a letter written recently to the Veterans' Affairs Administrator by the United Federal Workers of America.

"It is our conviction," the letter stated, . . . "that your immediate attention to the establishment of the following program by the Veterans' Administration will considerably improve personnel conditions which are injurious not only to the workers but to the patients for whom these facilities were created:

1. Establishment of an 8-hour day, 40-hour week for all personnel at present working more than 8 hours daily and 40 hours weekly. 2. Abolition of Q. S. and L payments for employes on vacation and sick leave. 3. Mandatory first choice to outside maintenance of men and women with dependents. 4. Investigation of actual costs of Q. S. and L., with a view toward making deductions for Q. S. and L. only on the basis of actual cost, and a commensurate increase in salaries. 5. Acceptance of Government quarters on a basis of actual cost, and a commensurate increase in salaries. 5. Acceptance of Government quarters on an optional basis, at other than isolated localities. 6. Elimination of grade B classification for attendants, except as a 6-month probational rating, with automatic promotion to grade A after 6 months of satisfactory service. . . .

7. Employment of funds saved in granting deserved periodic salary increases. 8. Compensatory time off for all necessary overtime—the standard work-day being considered 8 hours, except in times of emergency; stand-in duty also being considered in the nature of overtime. 9. Time off on all legal holidays, with compensatory time off for persons on skeleton staff required to operate facilities. 10. A detailed statement to the U. F. W. A. on the efficiency rating systems used throughout the facilities and homes. . . .

11. Adequate medical care for the personnel in the facilities. 12. Elimination of practice whereby damages to Government property are charged to employes.

The Bacground.

In these requests for adjustment may be read something of the conditions as the employes have persistently described them. They have told of 6,500 persons earning less than eleven hundred a year; of night attendants who work on a 7-day, 10-hour schedule; of firemen who work 24 hours on and 24 hours off; of the chauffeur group who put in 248 hours of overtime in a month; of the elevator operators who work on legal holidays, and of the employe at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., who claims to have had $1,500 deducted from his pay for Q. S. and L. over a 10-year period when he was so situated as to receive none of the so-called advantages he was paying for.

The U. F. W. A., in its letter to the administrator pointed out: "We realize that some of these conditions exist because of lack of funds. However, we are convinced that many necessary changes can be made by careful administrative planning. . . . We know that you will agree with us that these grievances, if corrected, would not only help the facility employes but would also insure better care for the patients. . . . Were these conditions . . . of recent origin, there would not, perhaps, be the need for immediate action. Unfortunately, these conditions are not recent—some have continued for as long as 15 years and warrant your immediate attention and correction."

A Correction.

On April 24 last Capt. Slyvester Dunphy and his crew of six were rescued when their British schooner, Charles and Vernon, sank off the Virginia coast. They were brought ashore by the American motorship Lake Ormoc. It was reported in The Washington Post of April 26 that Capt. Dunphy had said that he was unable to get the pumps working after the ship sprang a leak and that everyone on board became frightened and began praying as they hoisted a distress signal.

Capt. Dunphy states that the pumps of the ship were working perfectly, and that he never at any time made the statements attributed to him.

Adventists Hit Bill to Shorten Year by a Day

Proposed Change Called 'Challenge to Our Liberties.'

Forces of Seventh Day Adventists were united yesterday to oppose a bill pending in Congress which would divide the year into quarters of 91 days and eliminate the 365th day.

Declaring members of the denomination would devote the month of January to discussion of and opposition to the bill, the Rev. C. S. Longacre, head of the religious committee of the general conference, yesterday termed the bill a "challenge to our liberties."

Proposal Explained.

Under the proposed bill, introduced by Representative Joseph Gray (Democrat), Pennsylvania, elimination of the last day of the year would result in a fluctuation of week days, causing Sunday to fall in the middle of the week in some years. The new calendar would drop two days during leap years.

Two other pending bills were attacked by Seventh Day Adventists as threatening religious freedom. One was that providing for a $5,000 fine or two years' imprisonment to "advocate or teach principles of government based in whole or in part upon opposition to or discrimination against individuals of any particular race or religious creed."

Would Curb Mailings.

Third bill attacked was that prohibiting mailing of any "papers, pamphlets, books, pictures and writings designed or adopted, or intended to cause racial or religious hatred, or bigotry or intolerance."

"These bills, if enacted," Mr. Longacre said, "would destroy religious liberty, free speech and a free press just as verily as in dictatorial forms of government."

Separate Body Set To Rule Air Travel

By the Associated Press.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, said after a White House conference yesterday that President Roosevelt favored a new independent commission to control commercial aviation and that he would reframe pending bills toward that end.

Ickes to Address Palestine Parley

Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes will address the National Conference for Palestine, to be held here January 22 and 23, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Stephen S. Wise, of New York, national chairman of the United Palestine Appeal, which is sponsoring the conference. The exact time of Secretary Ickes' speech has not yet been fixed.

The topics to be discussed at the various sessions include "Palestine and the World Jewish Horizon," "Problems Facing Palestine" and "America's Role in the Future of Palestine." Among the speakers will be Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, of Cleveland; Rabbi Philip Bernstein, of Rochester; Rabbi Solomon Goldman, of Chicago, and Dr. Israel Goldstein, of New York.

Ex-Policeman Held In 'Numbers' Cases

Three men, including a former policeman, yesterday were charged with operating a lottery, folowing their arrest by vice squad detectives.

Charles Skidmore, 30, of Ritchie, Md., a former First Precinct patrolman, was arrested in the 700 block H street northeast. Several alleged "numbers" slips were found in his possession, the police stated.

The others were seized in the 500 block Twelfth street northeast. Police said marked money and a quantity of slips were taken from the men. They identified themselves as Vanus E. Lowman, 23, of the 1100 block Holbrook street northeast, and Edward Dennis, colored, 36, of the 500 block Twelfth street northeast.

$100,000 Suit Filed In Taxicab Attack

Charging he had been assaulted with a hammer while he was a passenger in a cab of the Independent Taxi Owners' Association, Inc., James H. Ashurst, jr., 4550 Connecticut avenue northwest, yesterday filed suit in District Court against the company and Abner T. Rowe, alleged owner of the cab, for $100,000 damages.

His subject will be, "Problems of Paying Benefits to Unemployed People." Dr. Levine, former instructor at Ohio State University, is an economist with the Social Security Board.
